Railroad Strike Feared

Swift Action Expected By US Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Announcement of two strikes and a prediction of more built pressure here Saturday for swift congressional action on Monday to avert a crippling general railroad tieup.

Officials of Machinists Union locals in Spokane, Wash., and Cumberland, Md., announced plans for their men to strike at 6 a.m. Sunday, local time, without awaiting any national authorization by top union leaders.

The western walkout would affect six roads and the eastern one two others.

Announcement of these strike plans came a few hours after J. E. Wolfe, chief spokesman for the carriers in their prolonged wage dispute with six shopcraft unions, had predicted a general Pacific Coast walkout at one minute after midnight, Pacific daylight time.

Union leaders disclaimed knowledge of any such strike plan, but congressinal leaders moved to act swiftly if need arose.

Wolfe told a reporter: "I can say with assurance on reliable information that all 22 roads serving the Pacific Coast will be tied up one minute after midnight."

He said that while only these lines would be directly affected at first, the effects would spread swiftly and "Unless something is done promptly the nation's economy will be brought to a halt quickly."

Legally, the unions have been free to strike since June 19 but withheld action pending efforts of House and Senate conferees to reach a compromise between two bills passed to head off the tie-up.

With the conferees deadlocked, union leaders served notice Thursday that they no longer felt bound by their voluntary no-strike pledge and would feel free to walk out after midnight, local time, Saturday. But they issued no strike call and authorized no strike by the 137,000 affected workers.

Commenting on Wolfe's prediction, James W. Ramsey, vice president of AFL-CIO International Association of Machinists, said, "I haven't heard a thing from any of our general managers."

He reaffirmed the union leadership's opposition to any unauthorized walkout but added, "I can't guarantee what will happen" in the way of wildcat strikes by local units.

The strike announced at Spokane would affect the Great Northern, Northern Pacific, Union Pacific, Santa Fe, Burlington and the Spokane, Portland and Seattle. That announced at Cumberland would be against the Baltimore and Ohio and the Western Maryland.

If a widespread walkout begins despite pleas against it by the White House and congressional leaders, all senators and representatives will be asked to hurry back here for prompt action, it was learned.

The deadlocked Senate-House compromise effort scheduled to resume at 3 p.m. EDT Monday would be advanced to 9 a.m., an informed source said.

ONE FATALITY — THREE INJURED — One person, Mrs. Nellie G. Haverstock, 59, of Kansas City, died of injuries received in the above accident Saturday afternoon on U.S. Highway 50, eight-tenths of a mile west of the LaMonte junction as of State Route 127. Her husband, John D. Haverstock, 58, is in critical condition as is Miss Bessie Boan, 54, sister of Mrs. Haverstock, at Bothwell Hospital. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Haverstock, Bryan Edward, 17, driver of the car, received minor injuries. The automobile was demolished. (Democrat-Capital photo)

Death Toll At 3

Riots In New Jersey Are Cooled By Pelting Rain

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey National Guardsmen looked to intermittent, pelting rain Saturday for aid in their battle to control rioters in Newark's devastated Negro slums. But fire bombing and looting flared sporadically with the end of a nightlong curfew.

The death toll from three nights of racial rebellion stood at 14, all Negroes except a white policeman killed by a sniper. Two of the victims were boys 10 and 16 years old.

Even the hospitals, where uncounted hundreds of wounded were treated, became targets of rioters' gunfire.

"I was thrilled to see the tight security," said Hughes after touring the riot area for the second day. But he extended the 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew for the remainder of the weekend.

Hughes and Democratic Mayor Hugh Addonizio discussed with Negro and white community leaders a plan to send 500 to 1,000 persons into the debris-littered streets with a message to Negroes to "play it cool."

However, they were up against the cynicism expressed by one unidentified Negro woman. Standing in the shadow of a burned-out building, she said: "Them soldiers can't stay forever. There'll be another time, whitey, our time."

The Newark rioting, which began Wednesday night, was the second worst outbreak in the nation's recent era of disturbed race relations. It was exceeded only by the Watts riot in Los Angeles in 1965 that claimed 34 lives.

Mindful of the continuing theat to law and order, major department stores and many Newark shops closed for a second day, not to reopen until Monday. Business was reported off 50 per cent in a city saddled with damages beyond estimation, but plainly in the millions.

The Newark Post Office remained closed, and mail was diverted for storage to New York and Philadelphia.

An embargo on the sale and possession of liquor was continued for the weekend in Newark, and some surrounding communities also closed their bars.

This led Negro Police Commissioner Leonard Simmons of nearby Roselle to complain: "They're rioting in Newark, not in Roselle. They don't close all the banks when one gets robbed, do they? Somebody pushed the panic button."

Large Troop Boost Likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. forces in Vietnam probably will be beefed up by 80,000 to 100,000 men, mostly combat troops, to bring the American troop strength there to between 540,000 and 550,000 within a year, say Pentagon military sources.

The prospect in the wake of Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara's recent visit to Vietnam and Gen. William C. Westmoreland's conferences here after McNamara's return is for the increase in authorized U.S. strength to total about 60,000 or 70,000 men.

This is the equivalent of two divisions plus their support. It represents the lower range of alternative proposals offered by Westmoreland, the U.S. commander in Vietnam.

Before these units are prepared for movement, some 20,000 to 30,000 other troops will be shipped to Vietnam over the next three months to fill out the long-standing authorization of 480,000 men.

Like the bulk of reinforcements to follow later, these men will be chiefly in combat type units.

The largest of the outfits earmarked to go within about 90 days is the Army's new 198th Infantry Brigade, activated in May at Ft. Hood, Tex. The 198th numbers 5,600 men.

Artillery battalions, helicopters companies and similar outfits also will be included in the 20,000 to 30,000-man increment.

Although the later reinforcements, to be sent during the remainder of the 1968 fiscal year, are spoken of in terms of division forces, it is likely they will move to Vietnam in lesser formations.

Class of '17 Sets Tuesday Meeting

A meeting of the class of 1917, Sedalia High School, will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, July 18, at the First State Savings and Loan building. Anyone knowing the addresses of the following is asked to call TA 6-6309 or TA 6-1042:

Project to Save Park Lagoon

Determination to save the Liberty Park Lagoon from being filled in and diverted to other use has led to the formation of a citizens committee to preserve and rennovate the old Sedalia landmark.

The Sedalia Park Board has created the "Save the Lagoon" committee in response to a large number of protests regarding a recent suggestion to fill in the rundown lagoon. City funds are not avialable to do the required work, which will cost an estimated $19,000, so an appeal to all Sedalians to provide the money was decided upon.

The lagoon, ignored for years, has been the terminal point for storm sewer lines that provided water for it, but emptied unsightly debris in the lagoon. The walls of the lagoon have almost totally deteriorated, and until recently an extensive growth of weeds filled the bottom.

The bottom of the lagoon has already been dredged and will be prepared to insure constant clearness. Work that remains to be done includes construction of new walls, employing a "Gunite" concrete process that will preserve them for at least 25 years, construction of new city water lines to provide the lagoon with a dependable source of clean water, and diversion of the present sewer lines to a different location.

Plans call for erection of a fountain in the center of the lagoon, a project being funded by the Sedalia Rotary Club.

Contributions may be sent to the Liberty Park Lagoon Fund, P.O. Box 133, Sedalia, or to any of the following members of the "Save the Lagoon" Committee:

L. R. Black, Liberty Park offices, Sedalia Park Board; Harold Fricke, Pettis County Locker System, Main and Grand; Kennie Miller, state license commissioner, Pettis County courthouse, or Kennie Miller Real Estate Offices, 108 East Fifth.

CONTEST — This is one of the tractors, in the 4,000 - pound class, that competed in the tractor pulling contest at the Smithton Fair Saturday. The tractors started at the beginning of the course, then, as it passed each ten-yard marker, two more men stepped aboard the drag. This continued until the tractor was stopped. US Government To Pay For Helping US Pilots Escape

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. government, seeking recovery of more of the American fliers shot down over North Vietnam, is offering rewards of 50 taels of gold to North Vietnamese who help them escape. That's roughly $5,000.

Sixteen-million leaflets pledging pay for assistance to downed Americans were showered Thursday night over a 90-mile stretch of the country northward from the demilitarized zone, a U.S. spokesman announced Saturday.

The disclosure came in the wake of the loss of another plane, a Navy A4 Skyhawk, to ground fire in one of 94 missions over North Vietnam Friday. The pilot is missing. The Skyhawk was the 607th plane officially listed as destroyed over the North.

The Da Nang air base, from which strikes are flown against Communist targets on both sides of the border, was reported back in full operation after a Red rocket attack in the night that killed eight U.S. servicemen, wounded 173 and destroyed or damaged 42 planes.

The damage to aircraft, runways and other facilities of the 1,600-acre field, 380 miles northeast of Saigon, was unofficially estimated to range as high a: $80 million.

Daylight surveys readjusted preliminary figures on both casualties and material losses in this third and most effective enemy raid on the base in the last five months.

All of the eight dead were airmen. A report that five Marines also were killed proved erroneous. The U.S. Command said 138 airmen and 35 Marines were wounded. Of the aircraft, eight jet fighter-bombers and three C130 transports were destroyed by the rockets. About 50 wire fired over 45 minutes from a point 4.3 miles southwest of the base.

The fire-trailing missiles, of Soviet design, cratered one of the base's two 10,000 foot runways, ripped through four enlisted airmen's barracks and exploded a bomb storage facility into a bright orange ball of flame the size of a football field.

"It's just unbelievable that more men weren't killed," said Capt. Jay W. Kane, Chevy Chase, Md., who has seen all three attacks. "This was the worst one yet. It's just something we live with though."

Col. Robert Maloy, Coral Gables, Fla., commander of the 366th Tactical Fighter Wing, said the only way to prevent similar damage in another attack would be to put everything underground. But he added: "We can't do that."

Seven miles south of Da Nang on the Quang Ngai Province coast. South Korean marines boarded a Communist trawler run aground by five U.S. Navy vessels and seized a huge store of arms and ammunition.

The shelled and fire-scarred vessel, a drab green, steel-hulled 120-footer, yielded 1,168 Chinese rifles, machine guns and submachine guns and six truckloads of ammunition, including rockets. All were believed shipped from Red China's Hainan Island, which lies across the gulf of Tonkin from North Vietnam.

The Koreans said they killed 25 armed guerrillas ashore in that area and one long crewman who had remained on the trawler.

It was the eighth gun-runner of that type intercepted since U.S. warships began a check on coastal traffic in February 1965.

Pettis County Records 13th Traffic Death

Mrs. Nellie G. Haverstock, 59, of Kansas City, was fatally injured about 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon in a one car accident on U.S. Highway 50, eight tenths of a mile west of LaMonte. She died at the Bothwell Hospital about 4:30 p.m., and became the thirteenth fatality for Pettis County since the first of the year.

Her husband, James D. Haverstock, 58, 2118 East 77th Street Terrace, is in critical condition at the Bothwell Hospital as is her sister, Miss Bessie Boan, 54, of 19 East 32nd Street Terrace. Kansas City.

The injured were brought to the Bothwell Hospital in a Moore ambulance from LaMonte, and a Gillespie ambulance.

Dr. John E. Lamy and Dr. Elliott Braverman attended the four.

Mrs. Haverstock died from severe brain damage, fracture of the neck. She also suffered a fracture of the left leg, and lacerations.

Haverstock lost a portion of one ear, multiple lacerations, of the head, arms and legs, and a brain concussion.

Miss Boan suffered multiple fractures of the extremities, slight lacerations, and bruises. She was thrown from the car.

Dr. D. B. Allen, a captain in the Medical Corps at the Whiteman Air Force Base Hospital, with Mrs. Allen, arrived on the scene seconds after it occurred. When the injured were taken from the scene, Dr. Allen, who had been enroute to the base, followed the ambulance back to Sedalia to the hospital to offer any assistance that he could give.

Haverstock told Trooper Charles Pieper, of the State Highway Patrol, he was headed east driving a 1965 Ford Galaxie. He said that he had pulled out to pass a car ahead of him and a large truck pulled out ahead of him apparently to pass a car in front of it. "I slammed on my brakes and the car skidded and went off to the right and hit the culvert," he told a newspaper reporter.

Trooper Pieper said the car slid 95 steps or approximately 285 feet when it struck the abutment of the concrete culvert. The car flipped across the ditch landing on its top and was demolished.

The car was towed to Knob Noster by the Jenkins wrecker.

Mrs. Haverstock's body was taken to the Kay's Funeral Home at Eldon. No funeral arrangements have been made.

Surviving Mrs. Haverstock are her husband, son, and four sisters: Miss Boan, of Kansas City; Mrs. William O. Rush, of Eldon; Mrs. C. J. Wood, Kansas City, Kan.; and Mrs. H. W. Crowther, of Santa Monica, Calif.

Cease-Fire Broken

Egypt And Israel In Sharp Battles

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Egypt and Israel fought sharp, new battles along the Suez Canal cease-fire line Saturday, with jets tangling high above the 104-mile waterway and gun batteries dueling on its sandy banks. U.N. truce observers headed for the scene. Jordanians and Israelis fought skirmishes across the Jordan River in a brief flare-up on another front.

Bulletin

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — The United Nations announced Saturday night that a new cease-fire between Egypt and Israel had gone into effect at 6 p.m. EDT after the second consecutive day of battles with planes, tanks and artillery along the Suez Canal.

It was the third straight weekend of hard fighting along the canal, in violation of a U.N. cease-fire. Each side blamed the other for starting the action — Egypt contending Israel sought advantages of some kind before the U.N. observers reached stations, Israel saying the Egyptians had started shooting with no reasons apparent.

Israel claimed its forces had shot down five Soviet-built MIG21 jets of the Egyptian air force, four in dogfights and one by antiaircraft fire.

Egypt claimed its pilots had downed four Israeli Mirage jets, French-built planes.

Israel acknowledged the loss of one plane due to antiaircraft fire but said the pilot was rescued after parachuting.

Egypt claimed no plane losses.

Aground, each side reported stiff artillery and mortar duels in a 50-mile stretch of the southern half of the canal. In the two previous weekends, fighting was concentrated in the northern half.

The Egyptian city of Suez and its satellite towns of Firdan and Port Taufiq at the southern entrance to the canal were flash points in the new fighting. Other clashes were reported around Ismailia, 50 miles north of Suez.

The fighting appeared to be a continuation of clashes Friday in which 33 persons were killed and 58 wounded. Seven of the killed and 22 of the wounded were Israelis, a military spokesman in Tel Aviv said. A Cairo communique said some of its casualties Friday were civilians.

Israel said Saturday's clashes had begun with Egyptians opening up on Israeli trucks on the east bank of the canal, occupied by Israel. A Tel Aviv spokesman said Israeli jets took to the air to strafe the Egyptian guns.

St. Louis Plans Are Announced

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Plans for a $4 million corporation called St. Louis Venture Capital, Inc., were announced Friday by the Regional Industrial Development Corp.

Dr. George E. Pake, vice chancellor of Washington University and chairman of the board of RDIC, said the proposed corporation would establish St. Louis as a center of technological research and development. Pake warned St. Louis could "wind up in the backwash of America" unless the city moves swiftly to attact business based on research and development.

The plans were revealed to representatives of 13 of the area's largest banks. The proposal was worked out by a committee named at a February meeting.

Venture Capital Inc. hopes to sell $1.5 million in debentures and an additional $2.5 million in capital stock. Banks and other lending institutions will be asked to participate.

Patrol Rank Is Raised

Sgt. Van Winkle Is Promoted To Lieutenant

Col. E. I. 'Mike' Hockaday, superintendeant of the Missouri State Highway Patrol, today announced the promotion of Sgt. E. W. Van Winkle, Sedalia, to the rank of lieutenant, and his transfer to patrol headquarters in Jefferson City.

In the same order Col. Hockaday said Trooper S. W. Wollard, now stationed in Warrensburg is promoted to Sgt. and placed in charge of Zone 4, Troop A, which includes Pettis and Johnson Counties. Troop A with headquarters in Lee's Summitt, is commanded by Capt. V. E. Maxey.

The order is effective Aug. 1.

Van Winkle is placed in charge of the Highway Patrol's Motor Vehicle Inspection Bureau, authorized by the 74th General Assembly, which recently ended. He will be designated superintendent, and will set up the new bureau to be in operation by Jan. 1, 1969. The new law specifies that all motor vehicles in Missouri must pass the inspection set up by the Patrol before the vehicle is registered in the state.

The new lieutenant has been with the Patrol since he returned from Europe in 1946. He was assigned to Troop A, serving in Kansas City and Lexington, until July 1, 1953, when he was promoted to sergeant and assigned to Sedalia.

Sgt. and Mrs. Van Winkle live at 821 West Tenth. They have two children, Mary Lue, 22, and Jim, 19. They plan to move to Jefferson City soon.

Army Sergeant's Body Recovered From River

JUNCTION CITY, Kan. (AP) — The body of an Army sergeant from Ft. Riley was recovered Saturday from the Smoky Hill River near here. He was identified as Sgt. Calvin Worsham, 30, on duty with the Non - Commissioned Officers Academy at the fort.

Survivors include his wife, Else, and a son David H., 2. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Worsham, live in Buna, Tex.

Search for another man continued in the stream.

Sheriff's officers said they were told that the two men started across the river in a boat but it overturned as it hit swift water being released from the Milford Reservoir.

Worsham's car was found near the river.

Better Family Living

Dates Ahead - (July 19, 20 and 21, 4-H Achievement Days) (July 23, 24, 25, and 26, 4-H Camp) (Friday, July 28, Extension Homemakers Club Council quarterly meeting.)

WHAT KIND OF FREEZING MATERIALS? It has been estimated that food preservation by freezing takes approximately one-half the time required for other methods The number of shopping trips necessary and the time spent in food shopping are materially reduced. The importance of this advantage can vary with the distance from shopping centers, the availability of the family car and the homemaker's pattern of working and living. Better meal planning is facilitated, even for the homemaker who has easy access to a supermarket.

PROPER PACKAGING: "Freezer burn," discoloration off flavors may all be and other off flavors may all be caused by the use of wrong packaging materials and-or the wrong application of good materials. All frozen foods need to be protected from loss of moisture in the dry air of the freezer. Wrapping materials which possess this quality include polyethylene film and various types of coated and laminated freezer papers.

Selection of packaging materials completely impervious both to water vapor and to oxygen is still not enough. If wrapping materials are loosely applied, either because material is not pliable or because of careless techniques, moisture vapor can still escape from the surface in the form of 'cavity ice,' causing food to become dried.

OTHER REQUIREMENTS FORWRAPPING: Theyshould be greaseproof; strong when wet; must cling closely without sticki g to meats and other foods; should not become brittle or crack at freezer temperatures; should be odorless and tasteless; tough enough to resist tearing and puncturing in handling. (Materials otherwise satisfactory which are not tear and puncture-proof are often used with overwraps).

CONTAINERS FOR FROZEN FOODS: Folding waxed cartons with liners of cellophane, polzethylene, or laminated paper; rectangular in shape; available in a variety of sizes; packages stack well. Plastic-coated or heavily waxed cartons, round or square; stack and nest easily; available in a variety of sizes; Square plastic containers with tapered sides and tight fitting lids; stack and nest easily; foods may be removed without thawing.

Aluminum containers in pint and quart sizes can be used for freezing and reheating foods. Heavy aluminum foil containers, some with heavy foil lids. Glass freezer jars have wide mouths to permit removal of partially thawed foods; flat caps permit stacking; reusable. Heat-proof glass and ceramic casseroles (to be sealed with freezer tape). Vacuum-pack coffee and shortening cans sealed with freezer tape (acceptable for non acid foods. Freezer tape, various types of marking pens or marking labels are needed for all materials.

WHICH TO BUY: Remember some materials cost more than others, some can be reused, some need to be discarded after one use, some take up more space and some are more easily labeled.

IS IT NECESSARY TO BLANCH VEGETABLES? The one step in home freezing most likely to be skipped is a very important one for retetntion of quality in tome frozen vegetables. Research at the USAD and various universities has proven repeatedly that heating od home frozen vegetables is a must for preserving flavor, color and nutrients in all vegetables except green peppers.

Recommended heating time varies for different vegetables and different size pieces of the same vegetable, but the reason is the same for all vegetables. Until the time vegetables are ready to pick, enzymes help them to grow and mature. The purpose of heating is to stop the action of these enzymes. If the enzyme action is not stopped by heating, frozen vegetables may become tough, discolored or develop off flavors and odors. On the other hand, overheating may contribute to softness in the home frozen vegetables.

FREEZING POTATOES: Potatoes are considered only fair for freezing. Frozen potatoes may not be the same quality as fresh cooked, but may be acceptable.

Many requests have been received lately on methods of freezing since potatoes have not been so plentiful.

French fried potatoes may be satisfactorily frozen. To prepare: Pare and cut potatoes lengthwise into uniform strips about three-eights inch thick. Rinse in cold water. Dry thoroughly. Fry in deep fat (parfried) until cooked but not browned (about four minutes). Take out of fat or oil, drain and cool to room temperature. Pack into cartons or other freezing containers. Seal and freeze. Store at 0 degrees F. The strips will maintain quality for three or four months. To brown in oven—brown ten minutes in an extremely hot oven (500 degrees F.) turning strips as needed.

NEW POTATOES: Select small whole potatoes, about the size of a walnut. Wash and scrub well. Peel or scrape. Steam or dip in boiling water for five minutes. Chill in cold water five minutes. Package and freeze. Note: new potatoes can be canned successfully in a pressure canner.

LOW-FAT CAKE: For people who must watch their diets, homemakers can leave up to half the usual fat out of batter for baked goods and still produce desserts that look and taste good. Cakes with half the usual fat look appealing to members of a taste panel in USDA's Agricultural Research Service. Volume of low-fat cakes equaled that of standard cakes, indicating that proper rising was no problem.

The taste and feel of the cakes with half the usual fat content rated a little lower than that of regular cakes. Best results were obtained when the fat used was butter or margarine, rather than other solid type shortening.

Muffins can also be prepared with half the usual fat. Biscuits can be made with two-thirds, and pastry with three-fourths as much fat. Although taste panels noted a reduction in tenderness and flavor in each case, they still found the products acceptable.

ARE FOOD PRICES HIGH? If I asked the question, 'Are food prices high?' I believe many homemakers would say 'Yes' without much hesitation–even new homemakers who have no basis for comparison but who hear others complain. So, let's examine food prices.

'How much have food prices gone up?'

This past year retail food prices were nearly five per cent higher than in 1965. This rise was greater than the long-term trend of between one and one-half per cent a year. But, it also is considerably less than the 11 per cent increase that occurred in 1951 during the Korean War–the last time prices went up significantly in a relatively short period of time.

These over-all estimates of price changes are based on indexes published by the Bureau of Lab or Statistics–the ones usually reported each month in newspapers to indicate what has happened to the cost of living since 1957-59. As of December, 1966, the Food Index had risen 14.8 per cent. During the same period medical care was up 31.9 per cent; prices of footwear increased 22.9 per cent; and public transportation was up 29.8 per cent. The index of 'All Items' had increased by 14.7 per cent.

As of Dember, prices of food at home had risen only 12.6 per cent since 1957-59 compared with 26.3 per cent for restaurant meals.

In today's supermarkets everything is displayed side by side. That includes all the things that get added to the grocery bill that aren't foods at all – laundry soap, children's socks, even Hi-fi records and encyclopedias. Over 20 per cent of the average grocery bill—the bill we tend to think of as the family food bill—is made up of items we certainly don't eat. I was surprised to find that we buy through the supermarket about 90 per cent of all the cat and dog food sold, more than half of the toothpaste, half of the aspirin and now, nearly half of the hair spray. In 1965, we spent about the same amount in grocery stores for dog food as we did for canned baby food.

Our young shoppers also get fringe benefits when they shop. Most supermarkets provide parking, check cashing services and air conditioned comfort. Some serve hot coffee to customers, and have loudspeakers to report lost children. There are simple demonstrations to let homemakers taste and evaluate new foods before they buy. The supermarket today specializes in selling a market basket of services along with its products.

But these are taken for granted by much of our national population. They can't know from experience the countless innovations in production and marketing that have brought us a bountiful array of foods. To many young people, food literally grows on supermarket shelves. They have little concept of the effort that is involved from the time a seed is planted until a food or a mixture of foods reaches grocery shelves.

Yes, food prices are and they're going higher. But you're still buying the highest quality food at the lowest cost of any country in the world.

Eat Lightly on the Road →

SATURDAY FOOD SPECIAL

Q—We are going to drive a thousand miles on our vacation. What's your best advice about eating at roadside stands and restaurants?

A—Just use common sense about your vacation diet, suggests the American Medical Association. Many a family trip has been spoiled by too many roadside hamburgers and soft drinks. A sound rule while driving cross-country is to eat lightly. Be cautious about heavy, rich meals, particularly if you're not accustomed to such fare at home.

Q—I can buy nonfat dry milk in very large packages and save money. But I wonder how long it will keep in good condition?

A—It will keep well for several months in a tightly covered container, stored in a cool, dry place. But once liquefied, it will keep in the refrigerator the same length of time as fresh milk. Incidentally, as you know, nonfat dry milk is whole milk with water and fat removed. All the protein, calcium, phosphorous and B vitamins remain. Liquefied nonfat dry milk contains only about 90 calories an 8-ounce cup.

DROOP SNOOTS of these Air Force jet transports look like something either with a monstrous head cold or a serious drinking problem. In the bulbous noses are 10-foot-long, 8-foot-wide dish-shaped antenna for tracking a spacecraft and locking onto it for transmission and reception of voice and telemetry communications. The jets are shown here at the Douglas Aircraft Company's aircraft modification division at Tulsa, Okla.

Handknits Ideal for Expo 67

By JUDY LOVE
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Are you one of the millions who's going to Canada? Expo 67 is a must for fair-loving fans from coast to coast.

If you have a date to tour the world's largest international exhibition, now's the time to choose your fair-going fashions. If you knit, so much the better.

Handknits take little space in your luggage. Pack them flat with a minimum of folds or roll them into tubelike shape around wads of tissue. Any creases that may result from packing will hang out overnight.

"Walkability" is an important consideration in anyone's wardrobe. Next to shoes that combine style and comfort (thank heaven for the trend to low heels), fashions-to-walk-in are a Montreal must. The knits you make by hand are the answer. Knits that fit properly never bind; they have a lightweight, free and easy fit, always ready for motion.

Consider the custom look of handknits, too. Judging from the size of fabric and art needlework sections of Montreal department stores. Canadians know their needles—and they'll know you've learned your k's and p's, too. In fact, in many Montreal schools, needlework lessons start in the third grade.

These points guided me in selecting the dress I'm showing today for my Expo wardrobe. Easy knitting directions are available to you, too. The dress is knit in Bernat's new Cotton- 'n' Silk yarn. It has a flattering semi-A line silhouette, to show off your figure. This easy-to-wear line slims and trims you—right up to size 18. The thick-and-thin texture of the yarn and a cabled cowl collar add fashion interest and fashion news for knitters.

Designed to wear in summer and into fall, the dress can be knit in sizes 10 to 18. Knitting instructions for the fair lady fashion are available for 50 cents from Stitchin' Time, c/o your local paper, P.O. Box 503, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y., 10019. Be sure to ask for leaflet No. S119, and include your zip code with your return address.

FAIR LADY FASHIONS. Knit this slimming skimmer in a new lightweight textured yarn. The slight A-line looks as pretty as it packs for wrinkle-free traveling.

talent to use in all sorts of ways. Here are two examples:

How many times have the loops that fasten the neck button on your husband's shirts worn out long before the shirts? Next time this happens, crochet a simple chained loop to replace it. A nylon baby yarn is best and if you sew the loop firmly to the shirt it'll last as long as it's needed.

Crocheting also can be used to give a custom look to your decorating scheme. Crochet a simple pattern in yarn, perhaps a worsted, making long strips about one-inch wide. Use them to trim window shades; they're easily attached to plastic or cloth shades with double-faced tape—that wonderful sticky tape that adheres on both sides. Art supply stores have it.

Pump Room Hottest Seat In America

CHICAGO (AP) — The maitre d' was headwaiter at the Tour d'Argent in Paris. The food arrives on wheels or in flames. And a guest might do a bump-and-grind if she's in the mood.

But Booth One is still the real reason why the Pump Room is Chicago's Place Where the Beautiful People Go, 28 years after Ernest Byfield opened the restaurant with $35,000 in borrowed money.

"It's the hottest seat in America," Lucia Perrigo said of her favorite subject, Booth One.

"It should be roughly the size of Yankee Stadium, so many people want it," added Miss Perrigo, who is the Pump Room's chronicler, historian and press agent.

Very few get it. The Pump Room is a restaurant — good food at high prices — run on the star system, and that is exactly how Ernie Byfield wanted it.

Byfield, a chubby little man who was part owner of several Chicago hotels, got his inspiration from the Booth Tarkington novel, "Monsieur Beaucaire," which is set in 18th-century England.

"The name 'Pump Room,' of course, comes from the famous watering place of Bath," Byfield once said. "We used the name because it is disarming and gay and because there was a particular and appropriate significance to that era; it was the first time that English aristocracy mingled with commoners and even play actors. In our Pump Room, play actors often mingle graciously with aristocrats."

Byfield "felt that the art of theater should be impressed on dining," Perrigo said.

"He felt that good theater needs stars," she continued. "The stars like to be seen — and the people from Double Dubuque want to see the stars."

The Pump Room opened Oct. 1, 1938. Ten days later, Ernie Byfield had his star, one of the most famous of the day.

"He was a great friend of Gertrude Lawrence, who was starring here in 'Susan and God,' " Miss Perrigo said. "So she came over after the first performance and sat in Booth One. She sat in Booth One for 109 consecutive nights!"

The place was an instant success. Customers fell all over themselves to get a glimpse of Miss Lawrence, seated by the door like a queen. A bronze plaque was affixed to the table, saying it was reserved for Gertrude Lawrence any time she was in town.

"When Gertrude Lawrence died, Booth One was closed for a week," Miss Perrigo recalled.

The crowd at the Pump on most nights is richly dressed, and not many of the men are under 35. Many of the women are, however. Stunningly attired and carefully coiffed, they are as bright as tropical birds in a forest of dark suits and tuxedos.

On one recent Saturday, the dance floor belonged to a lady well past 70. She was dressed in a shocking pink, silver-sequined silk sheath with a plunging neckline, and silver dust was sprinkled over her eye makeup.

The band was playing something with a beat. The lady tossed off a bump. Boom! went the drums. The lady whipped out a pair of pencil flashlights and stuffed them into the bosom of her dress. She danced through the room bumping and grinding as the patrons clapped to the music and roared with appreciative laughter.

A helpful waiter later identified her as a former silent film star who now lives in the Ambassador East Hotel in Chicago's Gold Coast district, where the Pump Room is located.

There were no stars in Booth One that night. Skitch Henderson was enjoying a quiet drink at the bar that skirts the wall, but the patrons in the middle of the room didn't even know he was there.

The Pump Room fell on difficult days when Ernest Byfield died in 1950. The Hotel Ambassador changed hands a number of times beginning in 1960, and meanwhile there emerged at least one serious pretender to the title of No. 1 Chicago spa—Maxim's de Paris.

Maxim's, operated by the owners of the original Maxim's in Paris, France, opened in the Astor Tower Hotel just down the street from the Pump Room. The restaurant specializes in French cuisine of the type made famous by its world-renowned parent restaurant, and also operates the Dis de Maxim discotheque for the young swinging set.

But lo, as one Ambassador employe put it, "Out of the East, riding a white horse, wearing a white hat, with six-guns blasting away with money, rode the Brothers Tisch, Preston and Laurence."

The Tisch brothers, who also own hotels in New York City, revitalized the Amabassador East and its twin across the street, the Ambassador West, giving the Pump Room a complete face-lifting in 1966.

Lucia Perrigo attested to the room's current success. "Why, just the other day, Victor Jabeneau, the maitre 'd, had such a diplomatic problem—Jessica Tandy and Hume Cronyn in Booth One; in Booth Two across the way he had Tony Martin and Cyd Charisse; and across from Booth One in Booth Twelve, he had Elliott Reid and Joan Fontaine."

Dislikes Action In Congo

By JACK BELL
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson's dispatch of three U.S. planes to the Congo may have cost him political ground he gained in following a cautious course in the Middle East crisis.

After the quick Israeli victory over the Arabs there was demonstrable satisfaction in the country that the President had prevented any indirect American involvement in the war.

But Johnson's unheralded action in dispatching transport planes and about 150 men to the rebellion-torn Congo in response to a request by President Joseph D. Mobutu soured the congenial atmosphere, at least in Congress.

Critics said Johnson acted precipitously to poke into the domestic affairs of a country where the United States had no vital interests and where it was not its primary responsibility to keep the peace.

One result, in the opinion of influential members of Congress, could be a slow-down in any executive move at this time to enlarge the American military commitment inVietnam.

They argue that Johnson, always keenly aware of the trend of congressional and public opinion, can only conclude that a great number of Americans are overly tired of having the United States police the world.

This attitude could be reflected in public reaction against any spectacular move to intensify the Vietnam war by substantially increasing troop commitments or expanding the bombing.

The expectation in Congress is that Johnson will move only in stages to give Gen. William C. Westmoreland more of the troops the general says he needs and that there will be no preceptible change in bombing patterns for the time being.

Senatorial supporters of the President's Vietnam course joined his critics in making it clear they want no moreVietnams by criticizing his decision to give even token help to Mobutu in his fight with rebels and white mercenaries.

This widespread concern was translated into action Wednesday when the Senate Foreign Relations Committee tentatively knocked $120 million out of the $600 million military aid program proposed by Johnson.

Better Homemaking

Beaux Shine at Grill-Time

By AILEEN SNODDY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK—(NEA—How men entertain their women takes on new meaning during summer months.

Whether it is a teen-aged son or granddad, the men are reversing the old saw that the best way to a man's heart is through his stomach. Since more men show off their culinary talents by turning a steak, hot dog or two on an outdoor grill, the gals are purring like well-fed kittens.

The merits of a lazy Susan grill, hibachi or kettle get equal time when men talk about cars, fishing tackle or mini-skirted secretaries.

A chap on a budget can impress a date by carting his own brazier in the trunk of his car to the park or beach. Many units bought in drugstores and service stations cost less than $5. The ardent male cook will want something sturdier if he plans to entertain often and wants to do a variety of roasts, shishkebabs and sea food delicacies.

A convenient, portable grill, rotisserie model, folds away like a suitcase. It is a perfect weekender, since you can store briquets and starter fluid inside.

The classic black unit is a staple just like the little black dress. But high fashion has come to the cookout with Chinese red, blue or emerald green and even khaki. Hy Schiff, an executive of one of the world's largest makers of grills (Structo), points out the interest in all-weather barbecuing has brought innovations such as wind-break devices and effective all-weather kettle grills. Many now are all-aluminum. The undercover technique, he points out like a good outdoor chef, "surrounds the food with heat and seals in juices." The swing-out motorized spit, elaborate wagon or barrel units that are like mobile ranges are reasonably priced from $30 to $90. Some may cost several hundred dollars, depending upon the extras, just like an auto.

Outdoor entertaining definitely is coming full circle as many units are designed to work indoors or outdoors. For example, there now are barbecues with chimneys to carry off smoke when they are used indoors so the family that really doesn't like the whole outdoor bit still can be in step with the neighbors.

Expect Hike In Visitors

By MARTHA COLE

The summer welcome mat is out for bird watchers, canoeists, water skiers, hunters, fishermen, boaters, swimmers, sunbathers, rock hounds, picnickers, campers, hikers and just plain strollers.

The 400-million mark would set a record. Last year there were 375 million visitors, up 26 million, or 8 per cent, over the previous year.

More and more people are living in the city—nearly 75 per cent of America's 190 million people live on 1 per cent of the land, the National Park Service says.

More and more people are "getting out" for outdoor recreation in the country, the woods and the lakes—"more and more people are turning to this as a substitute for the tranquilizer and the aspirin," says John S. Gottschalk, director of the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife.

The Bureau of Outdoor Recreation estimates that more than 90 per cent of the population participates annually in outdoor recreation, that a $20-billion-a-year industry is based on it and that local, state and federal government expenditure for it is a billion dollars or more a year.

Seven federal agencies have opened their lands and waters to the public for recreation.

They include the Forest Service, with 186 million acres of land in 41 states; the National Park Service with 27 million acres of land; the Army Corps of Engineers with its reservoirs and waterways; the Tennessee Valley Authority with its network of dams and lakes; the Bureau of Land Management, with 457 million acres of public domain in Alaska and 11 Western states.

They reported to Congress this year problems in handling their ever-increasing total of visitors.

The Bureau of Land Management said it had developed camping and picnicking units at 151 locations and estimated these would accommodate only one-third of the visitors to its land.

E.P. Cliff, chief of the Forest Service, said that the lack of developed sites capacity was forcing people to use undeveloped areas, creating major sanitation and public safety problems.

The Forest Service said it had 9,500 developed recreation sites and it cost about $1,150 annually to clean up each site. It asked Congress for $10.8 million just to finance an acceptable cleanup job at the sites and another $11.4 million to develop additional ones.

The Forest Service land, with 57.5 million visits, led all the other federal lands and waters in visitor popularity last year.

But there always will be bird watchers. In the last survey of national recreation, in 1965, figures showed 52 million people, 12 years old and over, went fishing, hunting, or both and some nine million people engaged in bird watching away from their own homes.

Family Camping Theory

By G. DAVID WALLACE
Associated Press Writer

PATTON, Pa. (AP) — Charles Watson has a theory about family camping, the latest episode in America's love affair with the wheel.

"You don't have to be crazy to go camping, but it helps," says Watson.

Watson and his wife, their hats sprouting foot-high artificial bouquets of sunflowers and wheat, were standing Thursday in the midst of the National Camping and Hikers Association's annual get-together.

A throng of 27,000 flowed in a stream of red and yellow vests with cloth emblems, tortoise-shell pith helmets and umbrella bonnets; a serpentine maze of cars, trailers, camper trucks, canvas canopies and tents, portable charcoal grills and lawn chairs.

"I guess the average investment in those units out there is about $3,000," said Watson, who has a delivery service in Pittsburg, Kan. "I guess a vacation in Paris would be cheaper."

"Of course camping is cheaper over the long run," added his wife.

"Our neighbors went to Paris this year," continued Watson. "But we'll have more fun.

"We dress up in Smokey the Bear outfits and pass out lollipops to the kids every year. You should see us."

The people from 37 states and Canada at Prince Gallitzin State Park in the Allegheny mountains this week is 25 times more than went to the second convention in Missouri five years ago with "Grandma" Emma Gatewood.

The membership of the association has mushroomed to over 36,000 families in that time.

Grandma, a bespectacled 89-year-old from Cheshire, Ohio, earned an honorary membership by hoofing alone from Georgia to Maine in five months on the Appalachian Trail six years ago.

She doesn't have a trailer or tent—just a bedroll and a zippered canvas kit bag she carries around her wrist.

"I wouldn't sleep in a pup tent. I hate that," she said. "I just make my bed in the leaves. If it rains I put a piece of plastic over me to stay dry."

The Ku Klux Klan was formed secretly in the South in 1866.

Wife Must Pay Child Support

PROSSER, Wash. (AP) — A Superior Court judge has awarded William Hinson of Richland, Wash., $100 a month child support from his ex-wife.

Hinson, who was divorced in 1963, winning the custody of his four children, had been holding down two jobs. He was earning $465 a month.

Meanwhile his ex-wife, Mrs. John Cashen, married a man who earns $1,350 a month.

Judge James J. Lawless said it was the first time he had ever ordered a wife to pay child support, but that considering the circumstances, "the settlement was modest."

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: My dad and mother had been married 40 years when Mother died. A year later Dad married a very sweet, grandmotherly woman 15 years his junior. Doris was a good wife to him and they were happy. Six years later Dad died and left everything to Doris. This was fine with me as I was very fond of Doris and she treated me just like she treated her own children.

A few weeks ago Doris died. I almost went into a state of shock when I learned that Doris had left everything to her own grandchildren. This included the money she received when she sold my dad's business, the home my dad and mother lived in for many years, all the furnishings, her jewelry, and the life insurance she received when Dad died.

My children needed that inheritance and we were counting on it. I am so bitter I don't think I will ever get over this. It kills me to learn that Dad thought so little of us that he would allow such a thing to happen. Please help me get some peace of mind. — WORLD DESTROYED

Dear Destroyed: I suspect most of your anxiety stems from the notion that your father "thought so little of you, etc" — but chances are that he did not think at all. He probably expected to live longer and write a will "some day." This is, of course, unrealistic. The results of such poor thinking can be disastrous. I hope your letter will be a reminder to others who are procrasting for reasons of superstition or just plain reluctance to face the fact that they will not live forever.

Dear Ann Landers: Add me to the endless list of people who never thought they would be writing to you. I just had to respond to the man who signed his letter, "No Bargain Myself."

He is right when he says it is hell to live with an emotionally disturbed person. I know because my husband was a severe alcoholic. I tried for years to fight his battle. I lied for him when I should have been encouraging him to help himself. Finally, I cracked under the strain.

This is a rough and demanding world and while many people are making it, everyone, no matter how strong, has a breaking point. To be emotionally healthy is the greatest of all blessings. Now that I have seen the other side of the Great Divide I truly appreciate what it means. I am trying to help others who are less fortunate than I and at the same time I am fighting for my own survival every moment of every day. — NO ONE WOULD GUESS IT

Dear N.O.W.: This world is loaded with people who are quietly fighting for survival. I am filled with admiration for these struggling heroes and heroines for whom there are no medals—only scars.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 19-year-old blabbermouth who simply can't stop talking. I rattle on and on about inconsequential things and I'm sure I bore all my friends to death. To tell you the truth, I bore myself.

It seems that whenever there is a lapse in a conversation, even when there are nine people present, I feel it is my duty to break the silence. I blurt out absurd statements just because I think I must say something.

At the end of an evening I am disgusted with myself. What is wrong with me? What can I do to correct this?—YA TA TA TA

Dear Ya: You are a complusive talker, and, like most compulsive talkers, you are trying to cover up your feelings of inadequacy. You need counseling. In the meantime try to keep your mouth shut (by using sheer WILL power) unless you can improve on the silence.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Appeals To Public For Report

BRISTOL, England (AP) — Britain's doctors have appealed to the public for reports of damage to health believed caused by sonic booms.

The Scientific Committee of the British Medical Association, holding its annual meeting here, also appealed Wednesday for reports on effects of the booms on delicate medical equipment.

"If the reports show that there is some risk to patients or delicate equipment, then we will send a report to the minister of technology," said Lawrence Abel, a London surgeon who heads the committee.

Dream Of Art Donor

By MILES A. SMITH
AP Arts Editor . .

NEW YORK (AP) — A museum director's fondest, fairest and least attainable dream is that some day he will find the perfect art donor.

So there must have been envious sighs in museums all over the country recently when it was announced what Sidney Janis is doing.

Partly it's the fact that he is giving his favorite museum a large and very fine collection of 20th century paintings and sculptures, which art experts estimate unofficially to be worth $2 million to $3 million.

But mainly it's the point that his gift is labeled with three beautifully magic words: "No strings attached."

And as if there were a dream within a dream, there is an extra provision.

Janis is making it possible, years from now, for the museum to bring the collection abreast of the next generation's art—by swapping or selling some of the collection's present items.

For museum administrators, that is the last cry in a world where gifts and bequests often are eternally frozen.

It is a world in which single objects may be given with no threads, or only one or two, wrapped around them, but where a great many major gifts —such as whole collections— often are swathed in a mile or two of heavy twine.

Janis, 72, has been one of the country's leading art dealers since he opened his gallery here in 1948. But he and his wife Harriet, who died in 1963, also formed a personal collection of avant-garde works, entirely separate from the gallery. They began their private collection in 1926, a year after they were married.

Now "The Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Janis Collection" of 100 paintings and sculptures—by 54 of the century's leading artists —has been given to the Museum of Modern Art here. Janis served for years on its advisory council. Alfred H. Barr Jr., the museum's director of collections, said it is "unequaled among the many great gifts" received by the institution.

Why is a "no strings attached" gift important?

First, museum people have to think in terms of the distant future, and how their permanent exhibits will look then. Every big museum is like an iceberg, with far more items below the surface than you will see when you walk in. They would greatly prefer to show works of a given school or period together, for the sake of order and unity.

But major donors usually are thinking of something else. They would like to see their collections—like personal monuments —housed in separate galleries or a separate wing and exhibited as a separate entity.

To avoid losing a valuable collection, museums often will agree to a stipulation that John Doe's paintings and sculptures be kept together.

Some donors insist that a certain percentage of their collections be displayed at all times. Others require that certain favorite paintings must never be put in storage, even temporarily. But Janis made an unrestricted gift.

After the collection has been exhibited at the Museum of Modern Art, next January, it will tour other museums for two years. From then on, the museum has a free hand.

BAGS OF FOOD have been received by refugees in the Middle East's Gaza Strip before and after the war between the Arabs and Israel. The food and other supplies have been furnished by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency.

Stirring Up More Trouble

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Red China's leaders, seeming to hate just about everybody else, are playing with dynamite which could easily explode into big war in Asia.

Peking is steaming up trouble for her neighbors: Hong Kong, Burma, India, Macao, Thailand, Vietnam and Korea. Long-range, Red China also indicates intentions of resurrecting the severely damaged Communist party of Indonesia and heading it into another "people's war of liberation" in the style of Vietnam.

Potentially, the most dangerous activity at the moment is the turmoil Peking is stirring up in Britain's crown colony, Hong Kong.

It is difficult to fathom the reason for it. If the intention is eventually to force Britain out, a deadly dangerous situation would exist in British resistance or any U.S. involvement.

If Red China's regime were considered a rational one, the guessing would be that it had no intention of grabbing Hong Kong since the colony is important to trade and one of the most important sources of Peking's foreign exchange.

But many consider the current Peking regime far from rational under Mao Tse-tung, Lin Piao, Kang Sheng, Chen Pota and others who have banded together to dominate the country's armed forces and to purge opponents who might have been of a more cautious and practical turn of mind.

Hong Kong's Communists

Hong Kong's Communists have been rioting and terrorizing to demonstrate their solidarity with Mao's "thinking" and his "great proletarian cultural revolution". It is unlikely that these Communists acted without instructions from Peking. Perhaps China's purpose is a limited objective: to force Britain out of the mainland New Territories which are held on lease until the end of this century.

China also has stirred up trouble in Burma, which had been steering as correct and neutral a policy as possible for a nation having a 1,200-mile frontier with China. Once again, the rioting of young Chinese in Rangoon must have beem far from spontaneous, since it began with a sudden outburst of Mao badges and assaults on Burmese citizens.

China eyes South Korea as a potential arena of "people's war." In Thailand the Chinese support a budding "liberation war" movement in the northeast. In Laos they support the Communist Pathet Lao. In Vietnam, they arm the Viet Cong and threaten regularly to send "volunteers" against the Americans in the style of Korea.

This all could be part of an assertion of Chinese domination over the continent of Asia. The claim to such domination has become more strident since China became a nuclear power, and particularly since China achieved the wedding of a nuclear warhead to a missile and exploded a hydrogen bomb.

In a recent interview with a Japanese politician visiting Peking Foreign Minister Chen Yi gave one hint of what some of the pressure may be about—to exert pressure on local populations to force out Western presence everywhere possible.

Evidently the regime has the notion that its small stock of nuclear weapons has become a counterdeterrent which can inhibit any attack on China from any Asian country.

"The danger of war exists," said Chen Yi. "But war can be avoided because China's development of the hydrogen bomb has made resorting to nuclear weapons virtually impossible."

Thus, China, with the noise and violence she is spreading around Asia, may be gambling that her new status in the nuclear club makes her relatively safe from counteraction. If so, it is a risky gamble.

THE NATIONAL REPORT ON WHAT'S HAPPENING

1967 BIGGEST JOB SUMMER EVER: The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics has just reported to us that an estimated 3.5 million of you will be hard at summer work through until Labor Day . . . 100,000 more summer jobs available for guys and girls than last year at this time. Want to add a job to a present job or shake out of that lazybones mood and get work? Now that we've hit mid-summer weeks, experts advise the best bet is to look in your own back yard . . . both onbeat and offbeat opportunities are rife there. For instance, the New Canaan, Conn., Woman's Club, experienced since 1964 in running a program steering teens to local summer jobs, counsels: Look first, if you're a girl, for jobs as a mother's helper (housefuls of these around) . . . if you're a boy, yard work (neighborhoods full of these). Typical other girl jobs are—office work, camp work, waitress, clerk, salad girl (tossing them together), candy girl (in a theater). Similar guy job opportunities likely to be around are —odd jobs, restaurant jobs, store jobs, boys companion, lockerroom work, lifeguard, office work . . . Well, this gives you some ideas from just one community. Try your own.

WHY MISQUITOES LOVE YOU: Whining, dive-bomber biter mosquitoes persist despite modern extermination methods. Not only are you young and tastier—there are other reasons why you may be their favorite morsel. Scientific research of the last few years shows that if mosquitoes bite you bitterly this vacation, you are likely to be one (or all) of these—darker-complexioned, warmer-skinned, bristling with good health, perspiring moderately, breathing heavily and highly active, wearing dark clothing, or perfumed, cologned or lotioned. Sad fact is that the male mosquito lives only about a week, meekly sips only plant sap . . . so that mosquito that loves you so ferociously—is a female.

DEEP FREEZE THAT DISTRESSING NOSEBLEED: Adolescence is a likely period for unexpected, erratic, frequent nosebleeds. The new, low temperature medical therapy—turning up startling and successful treatments in a wide range of health uses—now recommends an ingenious technique for slipping a small balloon up the nostril, then inflating it gently with a below freezing liquid—this chill right on the spot stops the stubbornest nosebleeds in five or six minutes.

SWIMMING, "TENTS", BUGS FOR SIX MILLION: About a century ago, Frederick William Gunn, founder of the Gunnery School at Milford, Conn., several weeks after his school classes ended, rounded up some of the boys he taught and trotted them off to rough it in the country for two weeks of summer vacation (. . . called it "Camp Comfort"). This was in 1861 and that's how the idea for summer camps was born. It's grown from an eccentric idea to a whopping fact—six million younger Americans will greet nature in almost 11,000 camps, this summer . . . and, since the average camp ages run 6 to 16, large slugs of teens will sleep in hard bunks, crowd mosquito-netted dining halls. In addition, there are many special camps just for teens. Now all 50 states are speckled with camps . . . the largest number dotting New England (31 per cent), next the North Central states (29 per cent), the Southeast (22 per cent) and the West (18 per cent). Maybe you'll be camp incarcerated this summer or maybe not, but just listen to this only partial list of the kinds you can flee away to (or sometimes be counselor in)—athletic, foreign language, music, dramatic, nature, riding, sailing, science, trip, travel, tutoring, work, day, church, school, family, disadvantaged (ailments like asthma, speech defects, crippled, blind, emotionally disturbed, retarded) . . . and then, finally, there are the regular camps, still pretty much like the ones pop and mom went to.

The Universe Beckons

By JIM CROSSLEY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Take your first look through an astronomical telescope in your back yard and it is like turning the first page of a book bulging with the wonders of the universe.

Then on Page 2 of the book you run into some things not so awesome:

- It's hard to get the telescope aimed at an object you want to see.
- Once it is aimed, the target zips out of range at surprising speed due to the rotation of the earth.
- Other than the moon, most of the heavenly bodies—when you don't know what you're seeing—look like nothing more than little pinpricks of light.

Maybe the most shattering discovery is that, contrary to the impression you might have had previously, no matter what the weather, there's no way you can sit in a warm place with the telescope sticking out. Because of the optics, it has to be the same temperature as the air and, it follows, so does the viewer.

for the "FUN" of it

Consequently, if thinking of investigating astronomy as a hobby it is only sensible to sample it in the warm weather rather than January.

If you get hooked—thousands are—you'll take the rigors of the winter in stride. The reason? Viewing is much better in colder atmosphere.

The aiming and all the rest quickly become habit. When you know what to look for, it's one thrill after another.

The same sense of mystery and love of beauty which has led men to star-gaze from the very beginning still enfolds the novice today.

Actually, there are not many branches of science left in which an amateur can make a contribution. Astronomy is an exception. The possibility of a lucky chance is still there. Many important discoveries have been made by amateurs.

If you think you need a new diversion, investigate astronomy. Here's how:

First step is to read the article, "Amateur Astronomy" in the September, 1966, issue of Holiday Magazine in your library's files. It goes into detail.

Or, if you prefer, get one of these books recommended by the United States Naval Observatory:

"Observational Astronomy for Amateurs" by John Benson Sidgwick.

"Between the Planets" by Fletcher G. Watson.

Here's an asset. Even though you would be probing the lonely reaches of the heavenly seas you would never be lonesome and lack for friends if you got interested. Probably you'd join a club. They're found all over the United States. And amateur astronomers are members of a close fraternity.

Provoke Viet Buildup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Her sailors were sunbathing topside as the USS Maddox glided through bright-colored junks bobbing in the Gulf of Tonkin. The destroyer was in its Sunday morning routine — not much to do except watch the junks, write letters, shoot the breeze.

The Maddox was 15 or 16 miles off the coast of North Vietnam, in international waters. It interested the crew to see five torpedo boats in the distance because they presumably were North Vietnamese. But there was no particular concern. After all, U.S. destroyers had patrolled this area for more than a year.

Gunners Mate Robert E. Swift remembers telling a friend that it would be easy for the boats to hide in a cove, "have a party on sake and then come out and attack us, just like that." He snapped his fingers as he said it.

That sunny Sunday afternoon, Aug. 2, 1964, North Vietnamese PT boats did come out and do battle. Before the week was up the big guns were booming on the gulf again, feeling ran high in Washington, American planes began bombing North Vietnam, and President Johnson easily persuaded Congress to give him authority "to take all necessary steps, including the use of armed force." In effect, the Tonkin Gulf resolution changed the U.S. role in Vietnam from sometime — participant to big-scale warrior.

The massive U.S. buildup dates from that week. American troop strength in Vietnam was 16,000. Today it's 466,000. In the three years before the Tonkin Gulf incidents there had been 163 American deaths in Vietnam In the three years since, the figure has mounted to more than 11,730 dead and more than 68,340 wounded.

What happened that week in the Gulf of Tonkin?

It was initially a small naval action in which the United States suffered no casualties or damage. Small as it was, it left some questions in its wake.

Who fired the first shot, and why? Was it a warning, as officially announced, or was it a salvo to kill? Was the Maddox on a routine patrol — and if so, what about the mysterious "black box" so prominent between her stacks? What about that somewhat wraithlike second engagement — on a night that was "dark as the hubs of hell" — in which many of those involved had serious doubts that they were firing at a real enemy? Had the Maddox participated in, or provided cover for, a South Vietnamese attack on a North Vietnamese island in the same area a few days before, as Hanoi charged?

Three years after the event, the details of Tonkin were reconstructed by an Associated Press team in interviews with scores of participants. Some are still in the Navy. Others have scattered across the country as civilians.

The Maddox had left Yokosuka, Japan, on July 23 to patrol the North Vietnamese coast. But first she stopped for two days at Kellung on the island of Taiwan and took aboard a box the size of a moving van and a complement of about a dozen men.

"They kept pretty much to themselves," said Andrew M. Adamick, a young radarman. "Brought their own special shack aboard and set it up and nobody was allowed in there. Al we were told was that it was an ECM (electronic countermeasures) crew checking on radar and communications stations on shore."

On July 31, taking on fuel at the mouth of the gulf, the Maddox crew saw its first patrol torpedo boats. They were "friendlies" — South Vietnamese.

"It didn't occur to us at the time we'd be seeing more PT boats in a few days," said Capt. John J. Herrick with a laugh. Herrick was the commodore aboard the Maddox — in charge of Destroyer Division 192.

The Maddox's next view of PT boats was Aug. 2. These were not friendlies.

"We were going north and they were going south along the coastline, going very fast," said Cmdr. Herbert L. Ogier, the Maddox skipper. "They looked like they were staying in near the coast hoping we couldn't see them, but we saw them. So naturally we were alert. We knew they were there."

The destroyer also knew something about their intent. It had come from the "black box" — the ECM shack, said Lt. Raymond P. Connell, officer of the deck.

"This was the source of the information notifying our people that something was in the air," Connell said.

James H. Weinand, a radarman from Troy, Mo., who now helps build jets for use in Vietnam, also says: "The special communications group picked up some intelligence that we might come under attack."

All Capt. Herrick would say about advance warning was:

"It came to us over normal circuits we had on board. Every combat ship had equipment to monitor anyone's electronic facilities."

In the destroyer's radar room, the boats showed as a pinpoint of light in a round, glowing green field. Such sightings are known as contacts.

"The captain came down personally and told us to keep a tight watch on the scope," said James A. Stankevitz at his home in Stevens Point, Wis. "He wanted a good man on it, to stay on it."

Stankevitz was a radarman at the time.

The destroyer plodded along near Hon Me, a tiny island that had been shelled by South Vietnamese two nights before. Had the Maddox been told of the island attack and the effect her presence might have? Her officers either said no or wouldn't comment.

Near Hon Me the destroyer turned away from the coast. Cmdr. Ogier said it was to avoid the thicket of junks.

In the radar room the junks — hundreds of them — dappled the screen like snowflakes on a windshield.

"Out of all the contacts on the scope, I noticed this one particular group of contacts, three or four contacts, moving faster than the rest of them," said Radarman Stankevitz. "We figured they were using those other boats as cover. Those other ones we knew were junks."

The destroyer and the torpedo boats had been running parallel to the coast — separated by about 20 miles. The Maddox was about 16 miles offshore. Now the Maddox made a 90 degree turn, away from the coast. Would the PT boats follow?

"We had decided to open out to give us time; to see what they were going to do; to really test them; to see if they were coming after us or just patrolling," said the skipper. "They were pretty obviously coming after us. But we still had time."

A destroyer's maximum speed is slightly more than 30 knots — about 35 land miles per hour. A torpedo boat can make up to 50 knots.

Battle stations! The word was passed quietly. No clanging of bells that might excite the operators of nearby junks.

At the time of general quarters, the PT boats in the distance looked, in the words of one crewman, "like little sticks on the water."

But radar confirmed the boats were following the destroyer.

"We were tracking these guys, we had our mounts out," said Lt. Connell, who had been relieved as officer of the deck but remained on the bridge as weapons officer. "They were coming right in on us at a nice, high speed. I don't care how friendly they are when they come in at that high speed."

The skipper discussed with him the most effective range for a warning salvo. Connell said 10,000 yards.

Ogier asked the commodore's permission to fire warning shots if the boats got within 10,000 yards — 5.6 miles.

"I granted permission to do this," Herrick said. "I was the task force commander and it was within my authority under the rules of engagement to open fire if attacked."

What constitutes an attack? The torpedo boats had not fired anything.

Said Herrick: "The torpedoes are on the boat. The boat is on the way toward you on an intercept run. This is like pointing a gun as far as I'm concerned. The torpedo is sitting there and he's pointing it where it will hit you if he lets it go. That's an attack."

One gun in each of three two-gun mounts sent a 5-inch shell at the pursuers.

Were these warnings shots in the usual sense — intentionally long or short? Connell, the weapons officer, was asked.

"Oh, no, we were definitely aiming right at them because the speed factor was there," he said. "We didn't want to waste too much time in spotting our shots."

So it was shoot to kill?

"It was shoot to kill."

In any case, the shots fell short and their effect on the PT boats was as the intended warning.

"Of course, you know, if they had just turned and run away after we'd started firing at them, then we could have been in trouble," Ogier said. "Because they could have said, 'Here we were in international waters, too, and you went and fired at us.' But they came on in and fired torpedoes at us, which was good."

All but one.

"The round hit a yard below me, although I didn't know it until they showed me later," said Lt. Keith Bane, directing the guns at the rear of the ship. "I was in the director which is on top of a powder magazine. It ricocheted around the magazine under me. I was lucky it didn't detonate the stuff."

All three torpedo boats either had been hit by this time or they were faking with smoke from their generators. The Maddox was doubling back to try to finish them off when help arrived—three jets from the carrier Ticonderoga. The timing was almost like the movies. The Maddox hadn't brought enough ammunition topside and some of her guns already had fallen silent. Now, the jets, some 200 miles away on target practice, were given real targets to shoot at with their Zuni rockets.

There is no proof that any of the PT boats sank.

Round one in the Tonkin Gulf had lasted only about 10 minutes.

Gary Stephens and his brother, Ronald, of Wichita, Kan., joined the Navy in 1960. After boot camp they were separated for two years. Ron later requested "brother duty" and they were reunited aboard the destroyer USS C. Turner Joy in November 1963.

On Aug. 2, 1964 the skipper, Cmdr. Robert C. Barnhart Jr., announced the ship was heading for Hong Kong, a liberty port. The crew cheered.

"About 10 minutes later he came on again to say we were going to join the Maddox until we were released again." Ron said, "He didn't tell us why." The men groaned.

It didn't take them long to learn the ship was being sent—on express orders of President Johnson—to join the Maddox on the patrol interrupted by PT boats.

"We found it hard to believe we were in a war zone and when they told us the Maddox was under fire it seemed impossible," Gary said.

The Maddox came from the gulf, refueled and rearmed, and steamed back in with the Turner Joy 1,000 yards astern.

The Maddox signal light blinked: "Consider situation not unlike war patrol and demanding of maximum alertness and readiness. If we are attacked, follow our general movements at 1,000 to 2,000 yards. Take your own action as required to unmask batteries or avoid torpedoes."

To the men of the two destroyers, most of whom had never seen combat, this meant battle stations from dawn to sundown, flak jackets and combat helmets at battle stations; lunch at battle stations; tension at battle stations.

Monday and Tuesday the two ships steamed along the Vietnam coast, ready for anything and seeing nothing suspicious. At night they would move toward the center of the gulf and make "squared circles" with 24 miles at each side.

Tuesday night, Radarman Stankevitz said, "was the darkest night I'd ever seen at sea. It seemed like it was darker than the hubs of hell out there."

Peru May Have Tax Reform

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Peru's government, faced with a whopping budget deficit in 1967, is looking around for money. It may be necessary to revamp the country's rickety, out-of-date income tax system.

"The fact is that Peru needs a fundamental tax reform," says a U.S. economist. "It must have a broader base. Peru is taking steps in that direction."

Peru has 12 million persons. Almost 22,000 pay income tax. In 1966, the government collected 336 million soles—$12.5 million—in personal and business income taxes. That's about 1.6 per cent of the national budget.

By contrast, the economist said, the United States this year figures to collect $90 billion in personal and corporate income taxes against a budget of $111 billion.

An Alliance for Progress report has stressed the need for tax reform in Peru, and noted that the country must gather more money for enlarged programs of public investment.

The income tax base is 30,000 soles—$1,120—in earned income a year. A member of a U.S. tax team in Peru says the structure hits middle income groups hard, touching relatively lightly the wealthy class.

The highest tax bracket is for those who earn $26,800 a year. At that level or above, a Peruvian would pay 30 per cent in income taxes.

"When a Peruvian makes it big," an economist said, "he pays at the same flat rate. The phenomenon in Peru is that the more money you have the less you pay."

About 75 per cent of tax revenues come from so-called indirect taxes—import and export duties, alcohol and gasoline taxes and stamp taxes on all transactions.

Taxpayers file voluntarily and there is no withholding mechanism.

Failure in Peace Bid

Pope Paul Convinced Both Sides Are Wrong

VATICAN CITY (AP) — After years of attempting to moderate the war in Vietnam, Pope Paul VI has come to believe that both sides are wrong.

"It is necessary that bombings over North Vietnam territory cease," he said recently. "And it is necessary at the same time that infiltrations of arms and war materials into the South come to a halt."

At least 30 of Pope Paul's public statements in 1966, and 17 of them so far in 1967, have dwelt on the search for peace between the two Vietnams and on his own "profound grief of soul" over what is happening there.

"The Pope loves Vietnam, all of Vietnam, North, central and South," said Pope Paul in May to a pilgrimage of Vietnamese.

Beyond prayers and appeals, Caritas Internationalis—the international federation of Catholic charities—has poured almost $80 million in goods and cash into South Vietnam since 1954. It now is helping to fill a North Vietnamese Red Cross request for $1.5 million worth of hospital equipment for civilians in the North.

The war, as war and as part of U.S. government policy, divides American Catholics along with other Americans. "Hawks" and "Doves" exist as well among Italian, French, German and other Catholics around the world.

Just as Catholics everywhere don't see eye to eye on the politics of the war, Catholic theologians disagree on its morality.

One example of this was a letter sent last May to President Johnson by 168 priests of mixed nationality studying at the Pontifical Gregorian University of Rome. They pressed for unilateral steps by Washington to bring about peace in Vietnam, including a halt to bombings.

The letter brought a rebuttal from an Italian Dominican theologian in Florence, the Rev. Tito S. Centi. He rejected the letter writers' argument that Christianity embraces without exception the theses of nonviolence and pacifism.

"A harmony between faith and reason must be exercised," concluded Father Centi. "Not doing so can be traced only to our own ignorance." Encouraging statesmen "in the name of ignorance" to give up what their reason suggests, he said, "only serves to make the religion we profess ridiculous."

The one place in the entire issue where Catholic theologians generally concur is in the moral duty to be ready and willing to negotiate if and when a serious chance for it comes. Close aides say the Pope's desire to remain outside any political arguments of the belligerents has caused him to phrase his repeated peace appeals carefully. Yet the pontiff is said to have been aware over the past year of Washington's disposition for negotiation and Hanoi's rigid reluctance in the face of all suggested approaches.

While conscious of worldwide marxist pressures to bend public opinion against America's part in the war, the aides continue, the papacy proclaims a humane alarm over all that happens in Vietnam without intending to lend support to Communist psychological strategy.

Vietnam has been regarded as fertile ground by Catholic missionaries for 400 years. There has been church growth but it is relatively small within the preponderantly Buddhist culture.

Before the 1954 upheaval there were some 1.6 million Catholics in all Vietnam, or about 7 per cent of the total population of 22.3 million.

With the French defeat at Dien Bien Phu and the 1954 Geneva agreements, the populations of North and South were allowed to move from one zone to the other across the 17th parallel for almost a year. At the end of that time close to 900,000 Vietnamese had flooded the South. Among them—estimates vary—were 600,000 or more Catholics.

Why did more than half of the Catholics in the North move to the South?

One factor cited here was the creation of the so-called "movement of Catholics who love God and the fatherland," founded by the Communist regime in 1955.

The "patriotic Catholic" movement is led by the Rev. Ho Thanh Bien, 78-year-old pastor of St. Dominic's church in Hanoi. The Vietnamese priest is the movement's deputy president, responsible to a Communist government official for seeing to it that Catholicism in the North stays behind the Hanoi regime's policies. It is politically indoctrinated "Catholicism" unacceptable at the Vatican, which knows Father Bien as a lifelong friend of President Ho Chi Minh.

"We don't know what pressures Father Bien is living under," said a church official. "He appears to believe deeply in the cause he supports. We cannot make any judgment on him. He remains always a priest and we can only hope for him and pray for him."

Father Bien uses the argument with visitors that the southward exodus of Catholics 13 years ago was politically organized and directed, under the encouragement of Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York. Cardinal Spellman appears to have been singled out because his is the best known American Catholic name abroad and because he is military vicar for Catholic U.S. servicemen.

The Vatican is unable to calculate exactly how many priests are left in the North, but the best estimates say no more than 300—a reduction of two-thirds from the figure in the early 1950s. Seminarians total fewer than 100. As old priests die there will be few newly ordained to replace them.

Catholic schools, at least by Vatican standards, don't exist in the North. Worship is restricted and priests are able to preach to the people and instruct them tnly occasionally. The 12 bishonly were kept by the Hanoi government from going to the Vatican ecumenical council.

Despite the disruption of war, the Catholic Church's life in South Vietnam is flourishing. It has 13 archdioceses and dioceses, all but two of them headed by native Vietnamese bishops. More than 1 million Catholics are attended to by 1,854 priests, of whom all are Vietnamese except for 196 foreign missionaries. There are 645 advanced seminary students and more than 5,000 nuns teaching in schools and nursing in hospitals.

ROMEO AND JULIET take on a youthful look with Olivia Hussey, 15, and Leonard Whiting, 16, playing the star-crossed lovers in a forthcoming film. If it's authenticity director Franco Zerfirelli was seeking in casting the two, he's still a year late on Miss Hussey. Shakespeare's play, in describing Juliet, says ". . . she hath not seen the change of 14 years."

Old Hands, New Purpose

Skills acquired over a lifetime, often wasted among the old, have been awakened to a new purpose in a Jewish rest home at Atlanta, Ga. Women residents spend Friday of each week baking "chollah," a braided bread eaten by Jewish families at dinner on the Sabbath.

Mrs. Rose Seligman greases pan of dough.

Success of the weekly baking is evident in the enthusiasm with which it is done. The sense of dependency and futility which so many rest home residents feel is eased by the feeling of usefulness among the ladies, who prepare the bread for their families outside. The bakers include Mrs. Kate Weinberg, 102, who bakes for her "boy," who is in his 80's. Some do the work at the table while sitting in wheel chairs. "Come Friday they're ready and anxious," says George Landsman, director of program and development. "It's like being at home again, baking on Fridays," chortles one of the ladies, while another says nothing, just sings and smiles as she braids the dough.

New War Develops Slowly

SAKOL NAKORN, Thailand (AP) — A Communist "war of liberation" is developing slowly but predictably in Thailand's Achilles heel—the 1,000-mile-long knob of forest and underbrush that bulges into Laos and sustains eight million people.

Considering the proven patience of the Communist cadre who graduate from the Hanoi and Peking guerrilla finishing schools, the still-embryonic insurgency is probably on schedule.

The methods they use are the same seen in the early days of the Malaya and Vietnam wars.

But no previous Communist attempt at insurgency has been so much expected and so minutely charted by nervous Western allies who watched the Communists yield only after a knockdown-dragout fight in Malaya, and who are involved now in a large war in Vietnam.

Western experts have been roaming Thailand's northeastern provinces for years, sounding the alarm. The Bangkok government has not minimized the threat; indeed it may sometimes exaggerate the immediacy of the problem.

Major steps have been taken to combat the "aggression by seepage" from across the Mekong River border with chaotic Laos, just a few days' march from North Vietnam. The Thais are matching the large outpouring of U.S. aid to the area.

And yet, driving through the northeast's 15 provinces and talking with Thai officials and Americans in the six critical ones, one gets the feeling that the Communists are moving ahead on one level, the Thai government on another.

It seems that the obvious progress the government is making economically in this depressed region is not hindering the slow but measurable progress of the Communists militarily. The Thai government moves confidently forward using its own theories; the Communists move forward using theirs, with only occasional contact on the middle ground.

The Vietnam war developed in this manner, the Communist insurgents working at the grassroots, the Saigon government in the cities. In Malaya the British destroyed the Communist hydra because they applied a drastic antidote.

In Thailand you can get the uneasy feeling that the hard-won lessons of Malaya and Vietnam are being given more lip service than application.

What is the nature of the threat to the northeast? The day-to-day truth is not easy to determine, as in the earliest days of the Malayan and Vietnam wars. American military and civilian officials conceded that their information is second-hand, gleaned from official reports to the Thai government. These can be slanted one way or the other, depending very much on what the Bangkok governments wants to hear.

These days the government is emphasizing enemy helicopter intrusions into the northeast, apparently with the object of getting more helicopters to supplement the present 80 being used. U.S. officials say the helicopter reports are just not true.

Americans are not particularly welcome on Thai counterinsurgency operations, the U.S. military role being reduced to basic training and logistics.

Lutheran Opionion On Arms

NEW YORK (AP) — The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod says it disapproves of refusal to bear arms in particular wars because it's so hard to judge whether a modern war is right or wrong.

"Selective conscientious objection to military service tends to promote chaos and anarchy in time of national emergency," the church's eight-day governing convention said Friday in its closing session.

The stand differed from that of some Protestant denominations, which have supported "selective conscientious objection," in implied reference to the Vietnam war—although the draft laws don't allow it.

Without mentioning that war, the representatives of the 2.8-million-member Lutheran body warned of "the danger of subjectivity in making independent judgments regarding civil disobedience.

"The complexity of international relations makes it extremely difficult to determine categorically that one's government is engaging in a war which is in itself sinful and immoral."

The convention pledged "loyalty and obedience in this matter of military service," and urged pastoral counseling in "exceptional cases in our communion in which a Christian's conscience might lead him to refuse to bear arms."

Repudiating "civil disobedience" to protest laws considered wrong "on the basis of personal judgment," the convention said Christians "are to obey the laws of government as long as the government does not command the Christian to sin."

The delegates also asserted that capital punishment "is in accord with the Holy Scriptures and the Lutheran confessions," but noted that some Protestant denominations have condemned it.

The church also turned down demands for a broad investigation of alleged doctrinal irregularities. Irresponsible charges were blamed in part for the trouble.

Guides To Success In Films

Editor's note — Agnes Moorehead, who seems to relish playing a witchy mother-in-law in ABC's "Bewitched," has a rich and varied active background that includes being a founder and charter member of the legendary Mercury Theater Players of Broadway in the 1930s and one of the distinguished quartet — the others were Charles Laughton, Charles Boyer and Sir Cedric Hardwick — who presented a concert recital of Shaw's "Don Juan in Hell." Here she puts comedy aside to appeal for a worthy cause.

By AGNES MOOREHEAD
For Cynthia Lowry

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Acting is too often looked upon as a "gifted art." This may be, but having the gift is only the beginning. It must be honed, developed by training and experience.

In the profession today we have many stars with talent who lack the discipline and dedication that come with training.

The Mercury Theater Players in the '30s and '40s was a group of actors that practiced both. We wanted to learn, to experiment, to contribute to entertainment. To us study was the very important first step in any performance.

This is just as important today. You can't walk onto a set or stage not knowing your lines and how you are going to play them. This was never truer than in television, where time is precious. Just one unprepared actor can ruin a shooting schedule.

This is why casting directors keep using some performers over and over again. They know what they can expect from them, whereas it would be a gamble to give a role to an actor whose work they don't know.

Consider this a bid for the establishment of a national academy for actors. Many of the profession's ills can be attributed to the lack of an institution that would give neophytes the thorough training they need.

Into this academy would go the ideas and thinking of the best people in the entertainment world. The graduates would be the stars of the future.

The American theater and the public would benefit from the academy as much as the young actors and actresses who attend it. Once they master their craft, learn the value of discipline and the importance of hard work, they will be more capable of entertaining appreciative audiences.

Here in America we would have no trouble finding students for the academy. There are many young people with talent in this country. They are the hope and the future of the American theater. We just need a place where they can be trained properly.

To those young readers considering becoming a performer, I send my encouragement and best wishes. To you who think acting success comes overnight, I can only say that you have a great deal to learn.

Students Feign Mono to Dodge Tests

THE MONO "BUG"—a bite of convenience.

By DAVE BURGIN
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

BETHESDA, Md.—(NEA)—It's certain to happen at least once every year on every college campus.

There comes a knock at the health center's door and in slumps a pallid, wheezing, wet-eyed student. "Yes, what is it?" the doctor asks.

"Sir, I'm pretty sure I've got mono. I'm tired all the time and I can't study," the student hacks. "And I have a final coming up this week."

The student is behind in his work and is borrowing a little cram time. The physician knows it, but can't be sure he's not really telling the truth. So he's practically powerless in the face of a frantic, test-fearing student who claims he has mono. The student gets his excuse.

Mono—short for mononucleosis—has come to be the traditional grade-saver on the college campus. Because so little is known about infectious mononucleosis, students can claim it whether they have it or not and usually get away with it.

The University of Maryland Student Clinic at nearby College Park reports that mononucleosis cases do increase significantly around exam time. Mono's symptoms are such that doctors must immediately depend on patient testimony, not tests, for diagnosis and treatment.

But the big mono mystery could end soon. The National Institute of Health is out to solve the mystery and, if it does, an NIH spokesman cracked, "the college flunkout incidence could increase."

Infectious mono is also known as the kissing disease. It has been recognized worldwide as such for half a century. Virus is the best guess for its cause, but so far no virus or other infectious agent has been isolated from sufferers.

Symptoms are fatigue, malaise, chilliness, fever, sore throat and swollen lymph glands in the upper part of the body. Mono is a masquerader. It may resemble diphtheria, the stiff neck of meningitis, the abdominal pains of acute appendicitis, the rash of scarlet fever, the swelling around the eyes of trichinosis or the generalized abnormality of the lymph nodes which can be mistaken for leukemia.

Therefore, one of the objectives of the study (actually being conducted by the National Institute of Allegery and Infectious Diseases) is to look for links mono may have with more serious or potentially fatal diseases.

"Most of the patients," said a NIAID technician, "are between 15 and 25. Mono is more severe in persons over 30, but is rare after 35.

"We receive reports of about 10,000 actual cases in this country a year, plus thousands more with mono symptoms. There is usually a rise in the number of cases in late spring, and a smaller rise again in October."

Mono, which is believed to be highly contagious (therefore the "kissing disease" tag), is diagnosed in a simple blood test in which the serum from the blood of patients with mono contains antibodies that will cause the clumping of red blood cells of sheep and horses.

Also, the lymphocytes—specialized white cells of blood which, in mono, increase in number in proportion to other white cells—undergo mysterious structural changes.

Bed rest is the principal therapy, and perhaps mild sedatives to relieve symptoms. The mono-wise college student presumably takes an aspirin and climbs into bed with his books to cram for a belated exam.

While the annual mono incidence is relatively low, compared with other "minor" diseases, NIAID technicians fear far more people treat it as a cold or simply ignore it. The danger is obvious if the study should link mono to more serious problems.

Smouldering Battle Shooting Off Sparks

By HUBERT J. ERB

BERLIN (AP) — The East German Communist regime remains locked in a struggle with religion that lies largely beneath the surface but sometimes shoots off sparks like a smoldering volcano.

Officially, the regime allows religious worship. But it will not allow large numbers of West Germans to come to East Germany for the October celebration of the 450th anniversary of the Protestant Reformation in Wittenberg.

Martin Luther lies buried in the Wittenberg Castle church where he posted the 95 theses that launched the Reformation. His heritage is one of the things that Germans East and West, have in common.

Some 80 per cent of East Germany's population of 17 million are Protestants, mostly Lutheran. About 10 per cent of the population is Roman Catholic.

In East Germany the Protestant Church carries the major burden of opposing the official atheism of the state. Elsewhere in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, the Roman or Orthodox Churches bear the brunt of Communist repression.

A major problem facing both the Protestant and Catholic faiths is getting government permission to build churches and the money and the materials to build them with. Many churches are still in ruins from the war, although some of general historical or architectural value have been rebuilt. For the Protestants, money is less of a problem since each church member pays an annual tax, one per cent of his income to the church. This is traditional in Germany.

Because of its smallness, the Roman Catholic Church faces less open opposition from the government than do the Protestants. An aide to Alfred Cardinal Bengsch said in East Berlin recently: "We make ourselves no illusions. One of the reasons we are left alone as much as we are is because we are so few."

Bengsch himself is one of the few direct ties between East and West Berlin. Residing in East Berlin, he is allowed to go to West Berlin three days a month to minister to the 250,000 Catholics there. At 45 the youngest cardinal in the church, Bengsch became Berlin's bishop only days after the Communists had built the wall dividing the city and his diocese, on Aug. 13, 1961.

Both sides in the church-state battle try to capture the minds of the young. The Communists have instituted the Jugendweihe, a ceremony in which a boy or a girl of 14 swears allegiance to the state on the basis of atheistic and Marxist principles.

Protestant opposition to the state ceremony can vary from parish to parish. Said one East Berlin man, for example: "We have a new and young (Protestant) pastor. Although the church is willing to bend a little, he is not. He says, 'If you go to the Jugendweihe, don't come back here.' He has plunged the whole parish into a crisis."

The Catholic Church goes easy on actual punishment for those who attend the state ceremony.

There was a time when it was said that if a child did not go to the Jugendweihe, his career was as good as over. In some places this apparently is still true. But in manpower-short East Germany, the regime, too, has learned to bend a little.

Said a parish priest, "We try to get our children to religious instruction when they start school. If we succeed, they generally will skip the Jungendweihe. If we don't, maybe 50 per cent of more will go to the state ceremony."

"We also make every effort to see that our children scholastically are near the top of their class. This puts the state in the position of having to reject a good student and potentially paluable contributor to the society as a whole. We have found that, faced with this decision, they will let a child continue higher education even if he or she did not attend the Jugendweihe or join Communist youth organizations."

The age of 14 is critical because it is then that school authorities decide if a child is to go on in school or should learn a trade. This also is traditional for all of Germany.

Priests emphasize theology talk in their sermons because it is possible for them to draw on Scripture and parable to express a point running counter to the regime.

"The Communists," one priest declared, "are often so bound up on their own dialectics that they do not realize what is being said. If you know your church, however, you will know what we are talking about. It is a trick we first learned under the Nazis."

The courage of its convictions has stood the church in good stead in East Germany under two totaliarian regimes, under the Nazis for 12 years and now for 22 years under communism.

May Help In Plane Project

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is standing by, though as silently as possible, to help the hard-pressed British government pick up the pieces of its shattered warplane deal with France — if the British want U.S. help.

One outcome of the still developing political-military crisis centered in London could be heavy new British purchases of the U.S.-built supersonic fighter bomber, the F111.

But U.S. officials understand Britain's Labor government may prefer eventually a European solution to its problem of providing a suitable very high speed tactical strike-reconnaissance plane for the mid-1970s.

Central to the military and economic issues involved, including the future impact on Britain's aircraft industry, is an immediate political crisis which has jeopardized seriously the position of Defense Minister Dennis Healey. Debate on a motion of censure against the government over the plane issue is due in Parliament in a few days.

This political storm in Britain appears the main reason why U.S. officials prefer not to discuss the matter.

Privately, authorities here concede they are deeply concerned with the crisis and prepared to do what they can.

In Britain government critics have warned against any solution which would mean more profits flowing from Britain to U.S. corporations.

ENOUGH TO THAW any cold war is this beauty from behind the Iron Curtain. Czechoslovakian actress Olinka Berova, 21, is the first Eastern European actress to be starred in a major British film.

Lutherans Touch On Viet War

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A major Lutheran body which traditionally has refrained from critizing government policy says that a "divergence of opinion" exists about the Vietnam war — and that members should speak out about it.

Although avoiding any specific recommendations for settling the conflict, the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod said Christians are obligated "to relate moral considerations to political concerns."

The action Thursday by the church's biennial governing convention was described as a decisive shift from its customary stance.

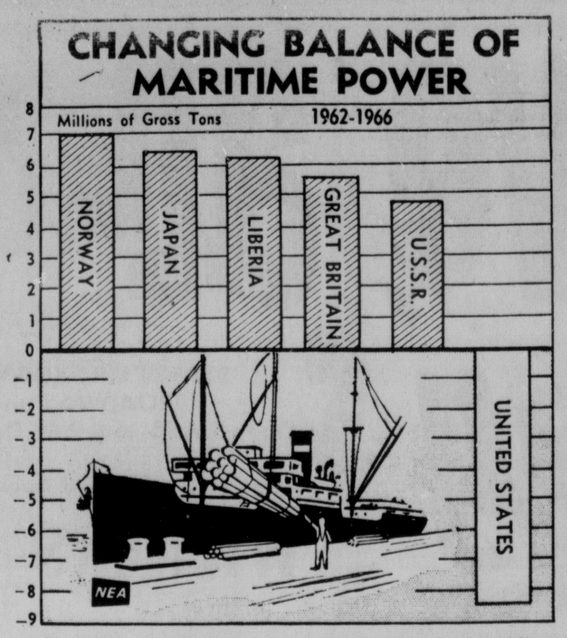
"It's an historic attempt to come to some definitive response to the situation," said Dr. Eugene Linsey of St. Paul, Minn., a lay delegate and political science professor.

"The image of the Missouri Synod has often been one of quietism. We're saying here that there should be expression by individuals about the war, but we don't attempt to impose any one view on the whole body."

The 2.8-million-member church, in reference to its position of backing government policy, cited scripture in Romans 13, saying, "Let every person be subject to the governing authorities."

But it also cited the church's responsibility, as enjoined in first Peter 3:11, to "seek peace and pursue it," and to be "an instrument" of Christ's work "to bring hostility to an end," as set forth in Ephesians 2:16.

In the "crises of our times," the resolution said, the church's first duty "is to proclaim the gospel of peace in which God's saving act in Jesus Christ addresses men in every situation."



While other leading merchant fleets have been adding tonnage in recent years, the American total has decreased. The five leading nations account for 64.3 per cent of the 47 million gross tons added to world merchant fleets from 1962 to 1966.

Social Life At Six

By KELLY SMITH

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six o'clock. Shadows splinter the broad lawn. Limousines roll up the half-moon drive to the gray stone mansion. Inside, ice clinks in crystal glasses.

It's the bewitching hour on Embassy Row.

"Six o'clock. That's when the social life starts," explains French Ambassador Charles Lucet. "It's very important, the social life. You not only have cocktails. You have a chance to talk to people. Important people."

The butler is at the door. The garden terrace is alive with diplomats and lovely women. Waiters in white jackets are busy in the turquoise and gold dining room. There's La Fayette's bust in the foyer and hanging above the staircase is a 17th century tapestry given to Louis XIV.

This is the embassy where a race horse once appeared at the cocktail hour, where a frisky puppy flooded the upstairs bathroom, where social jamborees rarely stopped during the Kennedy administration, where recently Chief Justice Earl Warren raised his champagne glass and said, "I propose a toast to the oldest friend of this country—France."

This is one of Washington's glamour spots.

Socially, Washington is the world's busiest capital. Obligations are staggering. Any one of the 100 ambassadors here can be found at two or three receptions and a dinner almost every night. Most spend 20 to 40 hours a week socializing.

Because his country has a long courtship with the United States, because this is France's No. 1 Embassy, and because this is his fifth tour of duty in Washington, Lucet has heavier than usual commitments.

A day trimmed to necessities still reads like a track meet.

Coffee is perking before 7:30 a.m. Upstairs, in the dove-colored west wing suite Lucet and his wife, Jacqueline, are having breakfast.

They read morning papers, letters from their six grandchileren and review the day's schedule: a coffee, two luncheons—one for each of them—a charity tea, three cocktail receptions between 6 and 8 p.m., and an 8 p.m. black-tie dinner. Typical day.

By midmorning Lucet has had his daily 30-minute briefing with senior counselors, read the ever-growing stack of overnight cables, welcomed a group of French businessmen and listened to a scientist bemoan dwindling water supplies. He will have a stag lunch at 1 p.m.

"Every day of my life all year around, I have a working lunch," says the puckish ambassador. Lucet is 57, a rosy-cheeked trilingual (German, French, English) career officer who could be mistaken for a Midwestern college professor. He's personable, prompt, has a scholar's memory for names, and endears himself to women, young and old, by gently kissing their hand in greeting.

"First, the ambassador must be a spokesman for his country, maintain dialogue, and do a sort of public relations job with the press.

"Secondly," Lucet says, "the ambassador is a diplomat. He discusses and negotiates with the State Department. Third, he must keep as many contacts as possible, in all fields."

"It's a vocation just to know world problems. An ambassador's job is very interesting, and when you're interested in anything it comes easy."

The 16-hour days? "I'm not complaining. It's a beautiful life."

The only meal the Lucets share is breakfast. They attend evening functions together, but protocol rarely sits a woman and her husband together—so there, too, they are distant.

American charities camp on the doorstep, asking patronage, use of the mansion and support. French and American tourists——as many as 500 to 1,000 a week —— want tours, apparently assuming the embassy is a monument instead of a home.

"I didn't realize the social side of Washington had taken on such importance," says soft-spoken Jacqueline Lucet. "I suffered terribly the first few months. Once I accepted it as a full time job——and didn't expect any time for myself—— I was happier."

The Lucets returned here in 1965 for their fifth time, and first as an ambassadorial couple. Fifteen of their 36 married years have been in the United States. Their two children were educated here. A son, Jean-Louis Lucet, is in the French Embassy in London.

Jacqueline Lucet is disarming. Fragile, unassuming and modest, she has cropped silver hair, large hazel eyes and a manner that warms and relaxes. She rarely talks about herself, and few know she holds a law degree, was a champion swimmer and tennis star, is an airplane pilot and a knowledgeable art collector.

"An ambassador's wife must be nice and polite, but if she doesn't limit herself she will overload her staff and not do what is really important. I would tell a new ambassador's wife to watch out for all the benefits. If I gave time to all, I'd not be in my house any longer."

At 6 o'clock on a hot, summer evening guests pour into the mansion: Congressmen, White House friends, a Supreme Court justice, a Cabinet secretary. The ambassador winks as he says hello.

"Parties," he had said, "are very important."

PARIS, France (AP) — It was his usual schedule: leave the Embassy mansion by limousine at 9:15 a.m. Arrive in his paneled, book-lined office at the chancery at 9:30. Appointments, 10 a.m.

But as the ambassador's car pulled out of the embassy courtyard past the gates to the street, a man lunged forward from the shadows. Menacingly, he dashed to the limousine, seized the door handle and yanked. In his pocket, police said later, was a knife with a 10-inch blade.

Struggle followed. Nearby police arrived. The limousine sped off. The would-be assailant was curtailed, and arrested.

To Charles Eustis Bohlen, tall, straight-backed U.S. ambassador to France, it was just part of a day. He asked there be no publicity of the incident.

The decision was typical of Bohlen. At 62, with 36 years in diplomacy, he is still wary of the public spotlight.

"I don't wear eccentric clothes. I don't drink to excess," he says. "I'm not one to write seeking reporters.

His wife, Avis, a stylish dimpled brunette from Mainline Philadelphia, shares his guarded reserve. Though little known to the public, admiring diplomatic wives have dubbed her "Mrs. Foreign Service."

The Bohlens keep their life as private as possible. The French press does not concern itself with social shindigs. Unlike Washington, which resembles a social jamboree, Paris is sedate. Photographers are not allowed at parties. Mrs. Bohlen does not give interviews.

Although the Bohlens don't flaunt entertaining, that doesn't mean it's nonexistent.

Inside is a three-story mansion with 113 servants, where, in a week, there may be one stag lunch, one mixed lunch, a black tie dinner at 8:30 for 70 persons, another small dinner for 12, a garden reception for 400, several cocktail parties for 20 to 30 and a tea for 150 American wives.

The household and entertainment budget is said to top $50,000 a year. One source said $75,000 was closer to the mark. The State Department budgets about $1 million annually for entertaining at overseas posts.

U.S. embassies no longer plow $30,000 into one mammoth 4th of July celebration. Likewise, Congress, aware of entertainment needs, attempts to be reasonable on appropriations.

Benjamin Franklin was America's first minister to the Quai d'Orsay. He rented a hotel wing. Thomas Jefferson tried several residences. The first 36 ministers lived in 90 different places.

In 1924, realizing the American ambassador had more to do than apartment hunt, the government bought its first real estate on foreign soil. That mansion, the present embassy, has been hotel quarters for visiting presidents and Cabinet members since.

Here is a gold-carpeted foyer with apricot-colored marble pillars and ornate crystal chandelier. A broad, sweeping staircase leads upstairs to five guest suites.

Socially, protocol and service at all U.S. embassies as well as the White House follows French tradition.

"The hardest part of being ambassador in Paris," said one intimate, "is holding up the grand manner of entertaining. In Africa, or Moscow, you have an excuse. Not in Paris. The flowers must be the freshest, the food the finest, the wines the tastiest, the conversation the liveliest and the spoons the shiniest."

Between 10,000 and 15,000 persons are wined and dined at the embassy in a year.

Bohlen, 6-foot-1, 200 pounds, who went to Paris in 1962, is a hard working public servant. He could have retired years ago. Formerly ambassador to the Soviet Union and the Philippines, he has been a top level policy maker in the state department, speaks Russian and French fluently-as does his wife.

Leg Art Now Complicated

NEW YORK (AP) — Leg art which was once a simple slice of cheese cake is now so complicated that, like all modern art, it is as much engineering as anything.

When the boot kick halted at the knees in the traditional fashion, function was never a factor.

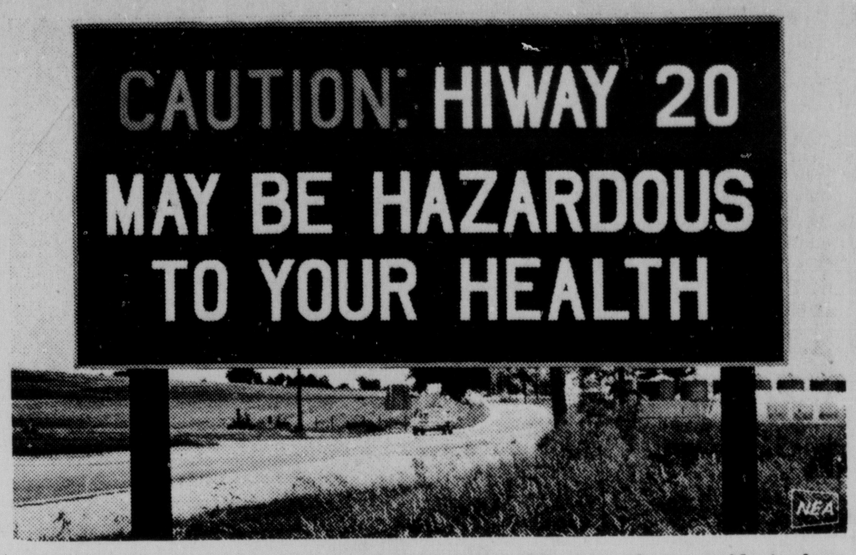
But when leg leather had higher aspirations, elastic inserts, zigzag zippers and everything but hinges were needed to give the boots the knee bends. At least that was the case until the glove-like plastic or leather legging came into being this year.

This slithery, shapely stemwear forms the roots for most of the way-out styles for fall previewed for the fashion press this week during a marathon of shows called the American Designer Series.

Much of the time the leather leotards were modest solutions to the tunic-like mini-skirts. However, Oscar de la Renta, a designer especially liked by women in the Kennedy clan, used them as often with midi skirts as he did with costumers who prefer costumes minus skirts.

Perhaps in salute to the ubiquitous Kennedy women, couturier Oscar's collection reflected the native costumes of females around the world and a good many of his models were up to their thighs in boots.

Fuzzy-hatted Russians in quilted midi-length Cossack coats began the runway process followed by turbaned swamis in golden rajah shaped costumes, Indian beauties in one-shoulder saris, and Middle-Easterners in caftans, and then Orientals in obi-sashed pajamas and dinner gowns.



TAKING THEIR CUE from the warning carried on cigarette packages, residents along 55 miles of Highway US 20 between Freeport and Galena, Ill., expressed their hopes for state action on road construction by putting up signs like this one.

Recipe For Bear Feast

By JIM HOWARD

MORGANTOWN, W. Va. (AP) — Riddle: what do you soak in brine, mixed spices, lemon juice and vinegar 24 hours, then baste in buckwheat honey and blackberry wine and roast for nearly five hours?

Answer: black bear.

There are many other ways of preparing West Virginia's state animal for a feast. The Rev. Joe Gluck, part-time pastor of the 192-year-old Fork-of-Cheat Baptist Church near Stewartstown, six miles north of here, can verify that.

When he and his congregation of 60 asked for "the makin's" of a bear feast to celebrate the 192nd anniversary of their church next Sunday, they were quickly assured they could have a 275-pound sow bruin.

But the congregation had to advertise for a recipe to renew the church's traditional anniversary bear feast.

The church probably collected enough culinary advice in the past ten days to provide a different-tasting bear-feast for several anniversaries.

"We were buried with bear recipes," said the Rev. Mr. Gluck.

And he's gotten a kick out of reading them. Nearly all the recipes included instructions for marinating, or pickling the bear meat. But the duration of the soaking varied from two weeks to as little as 25 minutes.

The ingredients of the pickling and basting juices were different in most of the recipes. One wag footnoted his instructions with this advice: "After properly pickling bear for 24 hours and basting for another five hours, throw out the meat and serve the juice."

The Rev. Mr. Gluck said those who had tasted bear meat say either, "It's horrible," or it's "the best wild game ever put on a table." There apparently aren't many "middle-of-the-road" bear eaters.

The three-foot-long 'gator escaped from the park zoo and was spotted Wednesday by two men as it was heading through nearby woods towards Roaring Brook River.

Lois Avey Married In June

The Methodist Church at Versailles, was the scene of the wedding of Miss Lois Fail Avey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ora Avey, Versailles, and Mr. Ronald L. Marriott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Barton Marriott, also of Versailles, at eight o'clock Saturday evening, June 24.

Miss Ruth Roland, Stover, organist, played wedding selections and accompanied Mr. Mike Wilbanks, Stover, soloist.

Escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of white bridal organza fashioned with an Empire A-line skirt which was embellished with appliques of Chantilly lace. The lace was also used at the scalloped neckline of the lifted bodice. The Long tapering sleeves came to points over the wrists. The aisle wide chapel length train, which fell from the shoulders, was trimmed with rows of lace. The elbow length veil of silk illusion, with scalloped edges and trimmed with scattered pearls, was attached to a crown of pearls. She carried a colonial bouquet of yellow and white carnations.

Miss Nancy Boeschen, Stover, was maid of honor. Bridesmaid was Miss Donna Marriott, sister of the groom, and candlelighters were Miss Debbie Self, Florence, and Miss Martha Cooper, Stover. Miss Candy Hunter, Champaign, Ill., was the flower girl.

Mr. James Schultz, Jefferson City, served as best man and Mr. Garland Marriott, brother of the groom, was groomsman. Ushers were Mr. Larry Avey, Buckner, Mr. David Marriott, Mr. Marvin Ball and Mr. Ronnie Avey, all of Versailles.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. Assisting at the reception were Mrs. Philip Avey, Mrs. James Shultz, Mrs. Larry Avey and Mrs. Cloyd Thouvenel. Miss Joyce Kreiling was in charge of the guest book.

The bride was graduated from Stover High School in 1966 and the groom was graduated from Versailles High School in 1960. He is employed at Gerbes Super Market, Camdenton, where the couple will reside.

Keefer, Markham United

The marriage of Miss Leona Mae Keefer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Keefer, Wichita, Kan., and A3C Charles Edward Markham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Markham, Knob Noster, was solemnized at seven o'clock, Saturday evening, June 24 at the Methodist Church in Haysville.

The church organist played traditional wedding selections.

Mrs Glen Thompson, Watonga, Okla., sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. Attending as best man was Mr. David Stevens, Knob Noster.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the church. Mrs Alvin Rhodes, Wichita, Kan., assisted at the reception and was in charge of the gift table. Mr. Dwain DeWolf of Enid, Okla., brother of the bride, attended the guest book.

After the reception the couple left for a wedding trip to Oklahoma.

The bride is a graduate of the Watonga High School and the School of Cosmetology at Watonga, Okla. The bridegroom was graduated from the Knob Noster High School and attended Central Missouri State College, Warrensburg, before enlisting in the US Air Force Base, near Wichita, Kan.

He Won't Make It

Mr. Average Man Reaches for the Moon

By TOM TIEDE
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—The average American has traditionally grabbed for the big things in life—money, rank, accomplishment—and so it is no surprise that in this age Mr. Common Man is now reaching for the biggest plum thus far, the moon.

Unfortunately, he won't get it. Not right away, at least.

According to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, average people by the thousands are asking to be included in this country's interplanetary program.

They petition NASA almost daily. Truckers, mechanics, haberdashery clerks—they all want to be part of the excitement, they all want to be participating witnesses in today's tomorrow.

They want to be astronauts.

"I'm 37 years old," a recent applicant writes. "I'm in good physical shape and I hate my present job. I want to fly rockets. Tell me honestly, do I have a chance?"

Honestly, NASA says, he doesn't. For one thing he's too old.

But even if the applicant were younger, his chances of getting a piece of the current space action would be nil . . . and the same goes for Mr. Common Man in general.

The requirements for space flight are too stringent. So much so that, to date, only 61 men have qualified as astronauts in this country . . . that's one out of every 3 million people.

"We can't accept ordinary fellows," explains a NASA official, "because spaceflight isn't an ordinary job. So we must screen applicants with severe requirements."

Such as?

"Well, first thing we do is to take a gun and shoot it at an applicant's chest. If the bullet bounces off, the man has successfully completed the first examination."

Actually, the primary astronaut prerequisites are not really super-human in nature. They are stiff, certainly, but not so insurmountable that a few everyday mortals would not qualify now and then. There are just six in all:

1. Applicant must be U.S. citizen.
2. Born after Dec. 1, 1929.
3. Under six feet tall.
4. Have degree in engineering or science.
5. Have 100 hours of jet piloting.
6. Be in good physical condition.

The last one is the sleeper. It's an elastic point which includes emotional as well as physical superiority and as such has axed thousands of exceptional men.

Deke Slayton is one illustration. He was one of the original seven Mercury astronauts until it was discovered he had a congenital heart murmur. The blemish was medically insignificant, but Slayton was abruptly ruled out as a space explorer.

Emotional soundness is equally as demanding. Candidates have been excluded from space flight consideration for such things as irritability under stress.

Says NASA spokesman Don Zelstra: "Before any candidate is selected he is required to take part in limited space simulator exercises. The tests are designed to familiarize the men with something of the space environment.

"While in the space simulator a man's reaction pattern is closely examined. For example, he is watched for any indications of claustrophobic or cabin fever quirks. If any are detected, the candidate is normally dropped.

"I would guess this simulator exercise, and its complexities," says a NASA spokesman, "would exclude virtually any ordinary man. Unless a person has prior experience to such stresses—says a test pilot—he would have a difficult time passing the physical thing."

Despite such pessimism, however, NASA does not forever rule out astronaut applications from John Doe . . . especially not after space flight becomes common.

Even now, some exceptional private citizens are being taken. Eleven civilians are presently in the astronaut program (two others have died) and the public ranks will contribute more and more as interplanetary sophistication bloats manpower needs.

Until such time, though, the average American must remain grounded . . . and the word from NASA to would-be spacemen is the traditional advice of a besieged employer.

"Don't call us," the agency says, "we'll call you."

Tom Tiede catches the spirit of the GI in his book, "YOUR MEN AT WAR." If you'd like to have a copy of these collected dispatches, send name, address and $1 to "YOUR MEN AT WAR," c/o (name newspaper), P.O. Box 489, Dept. (first three digits your Zip No.), Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Maxi Shirts—Gone Ladylike

By HELEN HENNESSY
Women's Editor
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK (NEA)—Queens and arbiters though they are today, women once were the followers and "me-too's" of fashion.

Men had a head start (no pun intended, ladies) with wigs. In fact, the ancient Egyptian aristocrats (male type) shaved their heads and wore wigs made of curled hair with a series of plaits at the back.

Poor people who could not afford the expense of real hair (it was even expensive then) had wigs made of black sheep wool. But wigs they wore.

The ladies? They wore their hair long and worked into a multitude of small plaits, part of which hung down their backs. They emulated the male wigs right down to the last plait and fringe and from the back it was difficult to tell who had the Toni. So score one for fashion's "men first."

Now let's take a look at another fashion-first designed for men—the shirt.

As early as the 15th century, men started doing something about their tunics (the forerunner of the shirt of today) that just hung down in unrelieved drabness. First they shortened it considerably. Then they added things. French noblemen in 1410 wore an over-tunic and a pleated doublet which flared out below the waist.

German gentlemen dressed up their's with buttons down the front, long sleeves or open half-sleeves.

From the tunic the shirt was born. In time it became almost of standard and fixed length, with no startling ornamentation for men.

But now the ladies have taken over as they did with wigs. And the Maxi shirt has become the shirt that goes to any length for a multitude of uses.

The fashion pendulum is swinging back to days of yore when men set the styles and the ladies followed.

The man's shirt, in pretty fabrics, patterns and in an above-the-knee length is now the most chic dress a gal can wear—even for evening.

THE SHIRT HAS BECOME the biggest thing in fashion. Stolen from the men by the ladies, it is a favorite now for evening and for daytime wear. The two shirt dresses shown here, one with horizontal and one with vertical stripes, are by Lady Arrow. Both are washable and ideal for summer days when the thermometer soars.

Fashion Tips

Versatile Stripes

Sporting stripes in a lightweight wool-knit blazer is the snappiest look for sailing, apres tennis or covering up in air-conditioned places. Turns shifts and pants into complete ensembles.

Collar Cleaner

If you want to remove the troublesome make-up line that so often appears on the collar of your light-colored raincoat, simply dampen the stained area with lukewarm water and apply a few drops of baby shampoo. Then, take an old toothbrush and rub over the spot until the outline of the stain starts to disappear. When this happens, begin rinsing the spot thoroughly. If the make-up does not disappear after one or two tries, let the spot dry and repeat the treatment.

Bells for Belles

Be the girl with bells on her toes this summer at the pool. A whimsical toe ring lends a lighthearted touch to sunning and funning days. Three little bells dangle carelessly from a golden band and makes you easy to find in a crowd.

MOSCOW (AP) — Gerry Mullilan, the American jazz musician, borrowed an alto saxaphone and sat in with a group of Russian players for a six-hour impromptu jam session.

Mulligan, who usually plays baritone sax, was applauded wildly by 150 musicians and their friends in a hot, smoke-filled club on Gorky Street Friday night.

"I don't like to give compliments," a local musician told him, "but I just want you to know everyone in Moscow plays the way he plays because of you, Gerry."

"They're good," Mulligan said during a break as he sat beside his wife, Sandy Dennis, star of "Up the Down Staircase." The film is the main United States entry in the Moscow Film Festival.

Mulligan and a Moscow quartet ended with a version of "getting Sentimental Over You." It was interrupted six times by applause.

Op-Pop Influence Is Affecting Home Decorating

By AILEEN SNODDY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Few single persons can do what wallcoverings designer Jack Denst did: give away old furniture to friends before moving to a new apartment. What fun to come to dinner and go home with the dining table!

For his new high-rise apartment in Chicago, Denst turned to pure modern a la Mies van de Rohe Barcelona chair, black and white. Throughout the country others who were semitraditional like Denst are being converted to well-executed modern furnishings. The current wave of Op-Pop definitely is influencing its acceptance and bringing an understanding of pattern's effect on our lives, Denst feels.

The slick look at home turns up again and again in shiny vinyls used on chairs and sleepsofas and as wallcoverings or see-through pillows with colorful designs.

The secret to decorating with modern is so simple that many tend to ruin a setting by over-decorating. Don't clutter a modern-oriented room with precious knick-knacks. Colors need to be bright and sharp and limited to two dominant tones—black and white, blue and white, brown and white, for example.

Sharp accents of citron, purple, red or greens in kinetic combinations in fabric, rug or paintings are the finishing mark in the home of a person knowledgeable in what makes modern.

Some designers soften the angularity of modern. One such group shows what can be done with new techniques. Wavy furniture results from cushioning a tubular steel frame with soft latex foam rubber and wrapping this in a nylon stretch fabric. Colors remain vibrant like red, violet, green bronze and electric blue.

One corner of a bedroom, for example, can be decorated for privacy with a chair and footstool of the sculptured design. Repeat the form in a Spanish-design wallpaper. The small area in red, white and blue includes a telephone, reading lamp, portable television, white modern table—all put together for a relaxing hideaway behind a beadangle divider.

The private oasis in the bedroom illustrates the growing breakaway attitude toward what furnishing rooms in a house or apartment require. Cut-and-dried bedroom, living room, dining room location and decorating is giving way to more creative and pleasing uses of the spaces.

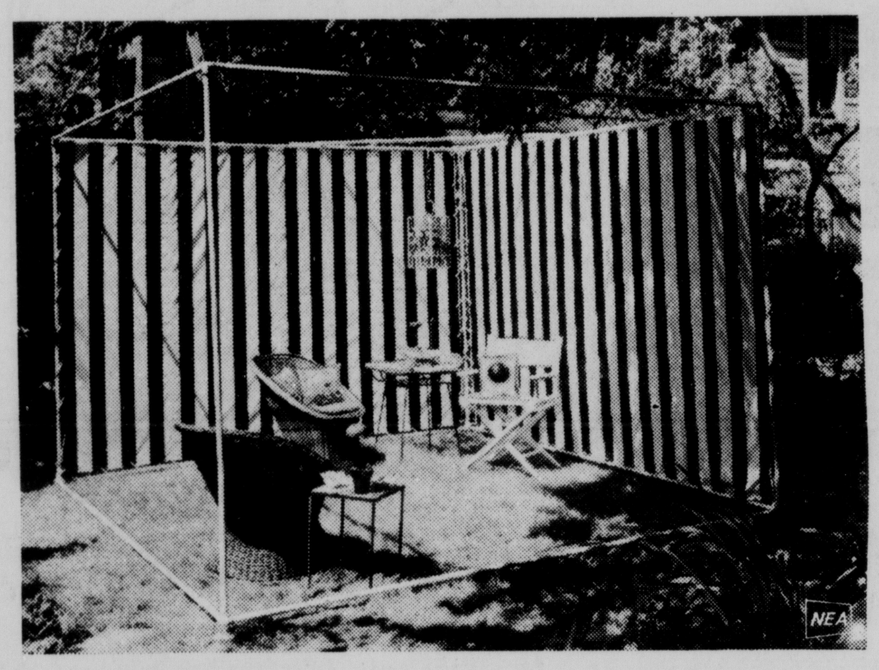
Return of Shirtwaist

The shirtwaist has done it again. This time it returns with the look of an Edwardian dandy. The collars are broadened but softer, sleeves longer, often ruffled and ruffled jabots. Belts definitely circle the waistline but there are a few available in button-all-the-way-down shift style.

Stitchin' Time

Make a Portable Garden Wall



PATIO WIND SCREEN of Weblon, dramatically striped in black and white, makes effective background for a garden gathering. Three or four panels, plus roof or floor if desired, could make a complete outdoor room, with framework provided by simple pipe construction.

By JOANNE SCHREIBER
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Need a little extra privacy on the patio? Don't call a handyman—just sew up a lightweight, portable, collapsible and attractive wall of a new awning fabric and lace it to a pipe framework.

Whether you need a single panel to block off the next-door neighbors, a double panel to make a cozy corner, or a triple panel to make a real walled garden room, you'll find this approach to fence-building easy and versatile.

The new awning fabric, Weblon, is made of Dacron polyester coated with flame-retardant vinyl. It is lighter than conventional awning fabric and far easier to sew. The Dacron content strengthens the fabric, discourages deterioration from weather and keeps the awning from stretching or shrinking in rain or high humidity. The vinyl coating lets you enjoy the elegance of a candlelit buffet or the romantic atmosphere of luau torches and hurricane lamps.

The panels pictured are 10 feet wide by 8 feet high, which is about as large as possible for easy handling. Smaller sections may be designed to fit individual requirements. To make a panel, join four sections of ¾-inch pipe to form a frame. The pipe and the joints are available through plumbing or building-supply firms.

A reasonably handy man with a good wrench can join the sections easily. If you live in a windy area, it might be a good idea to put flanges on the bottoms of the pipe sections for extra stability. These flanges can also be screwed to a wooden deck.

To make the awning sections, seam lengths of Weblon together to the correct size, allowing an inch extra all around for a hem and allowing extra fabric, if necessary, to match stripes. Use Dacron thread, a long stitch and a No. 11 needle. Baste with transparent tape rather than pins, since pins will leave permanent holes in the fabric.

Turn under a one-inch hem all around and stitch in place. Using a do-it-yourself eyelet plier kit, which is available in notions sections of department stores, put grommets around the edges of the awning to make holes for the rope to lace through. Depending on size of stripe or pattern, the grommets can be 3 to 5 inches apart. Use utility rope, nautical rope or even clothesline, to lace awning in place against pipes.

An awning such as this, in addition to providing a dramatic setting for entertaining and giving you extra privacy, can also serve as a season stretcher, allowing you to extend the dining-out season, or get a head-start on sunbathing in the spring. The panels can be shifted to block off the wind, and concentrate the heat of the sun.

The panels may be cleaned by an end-of-season sponging and hosing, and dismantled for easy storage.

TV Tips off the Universe

'We're Alive, Kicking Here'

By DICK KLEINER
Hollywood Correspondent

SANTA MONICA, Calif., (NEA)

Television is doing something besides allegedly providing entertainment — it is telling the whole universe that living creatures are here, on this little planet we call earth. And it may not be a good idea.

This is the view of Stephen H. Dole of The Rand Corporation, an expert on interstellar theories and the author of the book, "Habitable Planets for Man," and, with Isaac Azimov, a popular version called "Planets for Man."

Dole believes that we should not "advertise our presence on the galactic scene."

"After all," he says, "we have absolutely no knowledge of the great unseen radio audience out there or of their manners and morals. There is no reason for us to attribute to these completely unknown extraterrestrials a set of virtues far superior to those of some human beings or some human societies."

Dole thinks we should listen, and listen carefully, to see what we can pick up from space. He estimates there are a half billion planets in the universe which could support some kind of life—although whether or not such life has evolved is another matter.

Until television came along, any curious listener on any of these planets would have been unable to tell that our planet had life on it. Our ordinary radio signals were not the sort to travel long distances.

"But," Dole says, "experts feel that our television stations, and especially those concentrated on the North American continent, send out a fan of noise every 12 hours as the earth rotates. Signals beamed to the horizon thus shoot out into space and could be captured on some distant star.

"Those signals would not be intelligible, but they would be an indication of the presence of living creatures on this planet."

It will take a long time for this faux pas—if, indeed, that is what it is — to manifest itself. A star that is 100 light years away will not get our television signals for 100 years—and, since television began around 1947, it will be 2047 before some curious astronomer on that star begins to suspect our presence here.

The immensity of the distances in the universe is one reason why Dole is against any deliberate attempt to communicate with the possible residents of some other star.

He theorizes that it is now within the realm of technical possibility to construct radio transmitters or lasers powerful enough to reach a star 100 light years away. Theoretically again, we could send out some questions in a simple universal language.

But it would take 100 years for the questions to get there and, assuming they were understood and answered, another 100 years for those answers to get back. By then, he believes, the questions themselves would be out-of-date, our own scientists would have discovered the answers and all this interstellar dialogue would have accomplished would have been to let everybody know how ignorant we are.

He feels strongly that we should conduct ourselves as well-behaved children — do not speak until spoken to. But maybe our television stations are already speaking for us.

The Way to Beauty

Beauty Is What's Happening

By PATRICIA KING
Beauty Editor
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—"Times have changed," says Mrs. Suzuku Yamamoto. "Beauty and hairstyling have become important and lucrative occupations in Japan just as they are in the United States."

"Japanese women of every age want the hairdos that Americans are wearing and they want them at the same time. That is why I have brought Japan's leading hairdressers to Wilfred in New York."

In spite of Rudyard Kipling, the twain has met. The 8,000-mile gap between East and West has been bridged by women in their quest for beauty.

In 1945, when the war ended, Japanese women threw off the yoke of emperor worship and eagerly adopted things American. They were anxious to become international in their approach to fashion and beauty. This meant shedding kimonos and elaborately stylized coiffures.

Suzuku Yamamoto opened the Hankyu Beauty Schools of Japan and began to train a new crop of Japanese beauticians. Hairdressers had to be indoctrinated in the western way of beauty culture.

In 1937 Mrs. Yamamoto graduated from the Wilfred Academy of Beauty in New York. It was quite natural for her to establish an affiliation and use textbooks from her alma mater, translated into Japanese, as well as feature the academy's methods of teaching.

With the help of a beauty exchange forum, an event that is held annually either in New York or Japan between the two schools, western hairstyle techniques are demonstrated and taught by Theo Pierre, Wilfred's styling director.

The curriculum in both these beauty schools is similar. It includes hair styling, coloring, permanent waving, facial treatments, hair and scalp treatments, manicuring and shop management.

Wild-haired mannequins fastened to stands are what the students use to practice their cutting, pincurling and rolling on the first 500 hours of training. They take their dummies with them from class to class.

These wide-eyed dolls have to be refurbished with hair after several months of being cut, permanent waved and teased into virtual baldness.

Important Things In Lending 'Truth' Bill

By JOHN CUNNIFF . . . .
AP Business Analyst . . .

NEW YORK (AP) — There are some important things to remember about the truth-in-lending bill just passed unanimously by the Senate in an effort to make it easier for Americans to shop for the best credit terms.

First, it has been passed by the Senate only. Although odds are that a law will be signed this year, the bill could be changed next month in the House, either by those hostile to it or those who want a stronger bill.

Second, the Senate bill would not regulate lending rates. It would simply compel the seller to state the total interest charges in annual rates and dollar amounts. It would, therefore, expose hidden charges.

Third, it would not apply to revolving credit, the type of credit that most people use most often. Department stores may continue to describe their rate as 1½ per cent a month on the unpaid balance, even though it figures out to 18 per cent a year.

Fourth, the bill excludes first mortgages, and small purchases on which the interest charges might be $10 or less annually.

This is what the Senate version of the bill would do:

—Compel merchants to reveal in understandable terms what the annual interest charges are. A used automobile that once sold for monthly payments of $40 plus $10 interest would be shown to have an annual interest rate of 25 per cent. It will thus make the purchaser wiser.

—Bring standardization to the way interest charges are disclosed. Since merchants would use tables supplied by the Federal Reserve Board, comparison shopping would be much easier. A buyer could shop for credit.

—Promote competition that could, presumably, result in lower rates.

This is how it came to pass after having been stalemated seven years:

When first proposed the bill was blocked by conservatives in Congress. Since then, however, the Senate Banking Committee membership has shifted in favor of those supporting the bill.

In addition, the bill was diluted to appease opponents. Concessions were made to retailers, excluding revolving credit. And small accounts and first mortgages were excluded.

But other factors have been swelling the pressure also, among them the rise of consumerism and the acceleration in the growth of credit.

Consumerism is a bad word among much of the business community. It denotes a paternalistic attitude for the consumer by Washington, and it is reflected in packaging proposals, pure-food activities, advertising restrictions, a presidential consumer affairs adviser, and denunciation of deceptive marketing.

Some businessmen feel that consumerism is unwarranted interference in the market place, but many consumers and congressmen feel otherwise. And, as congressmen know, consumers are voters also.

The growth of consumer credit, however, may have made truth in lending inevitable regardless of consumerism. American families are in debt now as never before. Credit is a growth business, and growth generally means more regulation.

Each year about $92.5 billion of goods are purchased on credit, including $30 billion of automobiles, Household debt is now more than $365 billion, an increase of 53 per cent since 1961. And the percentage of disposable income that goes toward paying credit bills is increasing also.

The dangers here are many, but the biggest danger is not what it appears to be. It is not the size of the debt that worries bankers the most. Despite the high rate of debt, repayments are being made on time. And consumer assets are rising also, indicating that much of the money is being wisely used.

The danger, as viewed by senators, economists, educators and businessmen is that many tf those going into debt are very much unaware—either through confusion or apathy—of the terms of the debt contract they sign.

Teacher Shortage

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Florida Education Association says the state faces a shortage of some 4,000 public school teachers in September. It attributes the shortage to low pay and sanctions imposed by the National Education Association, which urged teachers not to take jobs in Florida.

Butte, Mont., was once known as the "richest hill on earth."

Another Trial Balloon

Unanimity of opinion is not the exact word to apply to current discussion among downtown merchants about a proposal of Mayor Ralph Walker concerning the subject of raising overtime parking penalties from 25 cents to 50 cents or even as high as $1.00.

The mayor states that the 25 cent fee is too low and tends to make gamblers of some of us at times. By that he means chances are taken by individuals who bet they won't get a ticket for overparking, a word by the way you don't find in modern dictionaries.

When some persons do get a ticket, they consider two-bits is not much to pay, so they just keep on hogging meter space.

Most of us have an occasional temptation to 'beat the meters or the traffic tickets.' Are we then less guilty than those who ignore and pile up tickets until the cops come after them?

Mayor Walker has indicated the parking committee will be given his recommendation to continue analysis of their department and consider raising the penalty because the 25 cent fee is too low. He notes that $465,000 in revenue bonds are outstanding against construction of Sedalia's parking lots.

No doubt the city needs more money to pay for the parking lots recognized now as a decided asset to Sedalia which is way ahead of other communities providing accommodations for shoppers. But some merchants believe that a blanket raise of the penalty to 50 cents or $1.00 is excessive, will antagonize shoppers, and not even accomplish the purpose of raising more money. They are right.

An alternative to the problem would be encouragement of the use of the lots themselves which are not getting the traffic they should. That's because too many store personnel—and that includes owners and managers—are using the on-street parking facilities, regardless of a 25 cent penalty, rather than the parking lots.

One dollar penalties persistently enforced against overtime parkers on Ohio avenue, Main street and laterals could very well ease the problem of parking congestion downtown.

An alternative is worth trying. If it doesn't work, then the department can go back to the old method, or make the penalty a blanket one.

We have a hunch that a heavy penalty for on-street overtime parking will drive store personnel and other offenders to the 14 parking lots and open up the streets for out-of town and in-town people who want to buy merchandise in this important Central Missouri shopping mecca.

If Mayor Walker's suggestion is a trial balloon, then let the parking department give it more gas for a swifter journey toward solution by a plan less likely to create antagonism.

Washington Merry-Go-round

Johnson Gives Nod to Red China

DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON–It hasn't been announced, but President Johnson has made a very courageous move in regard to Red China.

He has come to the conclusion that the United States cannot ignore the largest country in the world population-wise, especially now that China has the hydrogen bomb; and that it must become a member of the community of nations.

The President came to this decision despite the power of the China lobby in this country. Ever since the Mc'carthy era it has been worth a politician's life to advocate friendly relations with China. Gen. George Marshall, former Chief of Staff and the man who did most to win World War II, was castigated as a traitor on the Senate floor by both McCarthy and Sen. William Jenner, R-Ind., because he advised that we cooperate with the Chinese Communists. He suggested a coalition communist cabinet with Chiang Kai-Shek.

McCarthy was so vitriolic against three career diplomats who had advised the same policy that John Foster Dulles panicked and fired them. Since then few members of the State Department have been willing to stick their necks out regarding China except Roger Hilsman, Assistant Secretary of State under Kennedy, who has now written a revealing book on our far eastern relations.

For Johnson to make an affirmative decision regarding Red China, therefore, will win him few votes in the coming election.

—MAUER'S MISSION TO PEKING—

Nevertheless he decided—first, because China has nuclear weapons; second, because it is the controlling factor regarding North Vietnamese peace—that the United States should change its policy.

Therefore when Premier Ion Gheorghe Maurer of Romania came to Washington for a White House talk, Johnson informed him that the United States was ready to change its policy. The President further requested Maurer to go to Peking and inform Mao Tse-Tung that he, Johnson, believed China must become a respected member of the community of nations.

The President knew that Romania, unlike some of the other Communist states, had maintained close ties with China. He had an extraordinarily frank and friendly talk with Maurer, who was the only Communist Foreign Minister to come to Washington for a conference. Romania had been working with Denmark to try to find a formula for peace in the near East.

When Maurer went to Peking last month, the press reported that he was trying to patch up relations between the Soviet and China. Actually, however, he went to Peking on the mission for President Johnson.

A detailed report on his visit has not yet arrived from Bucharest. The President does not expect any change overnight. But he has made the first gesture and it is one of the most important foreign policy decisions of his career.

—THE GUN LOBBY—

One clue as to why the National Rifle Association is able to get $2,717,300 annually from the American taxpayers to practice target shooting comes from a look at the House Appropriations Committee which votes the money.

Chairman of the subcommittee on military construction and second in command of the defense subcommittee is good old Rep. Bob Sikes, D-Fla., who is also a Major General in the army reserves and one of the rootin' tootin' advocates of guns in the hands of hunters, Rifle Association members and others.

On the Senate side the man who writes the gun legislation is Roman Hruska, R-Neb., a passionate friend of the National Rifle Association. Hruska is now pushing a new gun bill which is a very weak substitute for that proposed by both the administration and the two Kennedy brothers, who want to guard against future assassinations.

—MERRY-GO-ROUND—

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., confided to Sarah McClendon that he asked LBJ to come to the rescue of Sen. Tom Dodd during the censure debate. LBJ refused. Earlier the White House made it clear that Johnson when Vice President went to Connecticut to speak for Dodd only because Johnson thought it was a campaign fund-raising affair, not a testimonial dinner.

MONEY CLIPS

by Mort Reed

The Kennedy half-dollar . . . .

(First of two related columns.)

Although bills were introduced in both the House and the Senate to immortalize President Kennedy on practically every denomination of our coinage, serious consideration was given only to the silver dollar, the half-dollar and the quarter.

Exercising whatever influence she may have had on the final decision, Mrs. Kennedy graciously objected to replacing Washington's likeness on the quarter and on Nov. 27, 1963, the mint was instructed to proceed with models for a new half-dollar,

Since the Franklin half-dollar has not run its full course of 25 years, the design change required legislative authority, but the models for the Kennedy half were well under way by the time that authority was requested by President Johnson.

The congressional act authorizing the new coin was approved on Dec. 30, 1963.

The obverse was designed by Gilroy Roberts, then chief engraver of the mint, and the reverse was designed by Frank Gasparro, who later succeeded Roberts as engraver. Both are recognized artists in the field of sculpture and engraving and they worked hard to meet the January, 1964, deadline.

Normally, processing a new coin from sketches to the finished die takes from two to three months, allowing time for approval of sketches, resolving difficulties, etc. In the case of the Kennedy half-dollar, it was accomplished in three weeks.

On Dec. 13, Roberts delivered a trial strike to Eva Adams, director of the mint, for her approval. On Dec. 17 a similar piece was shown to Mrs. Kennedy and the late President's brother, Robert. All were favorably impressed with the design. Mrs. Kennedy suggested that the portrait could be improved slightly if the part in the President's hair was less-pronounced. This change was made and on Dec. 27, the second trial piece was flown to West Palm Beach for Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon's final approval.

On March 5, 1964, 26 million of the new coins were delivered to Federal Reserve banks for distribution to the eager public.

An interesting sidelight is the controversy caused by the stylized GR initials Roberts placed on the trunction of the neck of the profile. Many columnists were responsible for the spread of the rumor that the initials were in fact the Russian hammer and sickle. And this rumor persisted until officially denied by the Treasury Department.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Defense Slip Helps South

By Oswald & James Jacoby
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

West's double of four spades is not recommended. He knows that South is in for some bad news in trumps but North and South have reached game with no strain at all and the double may give away the trump situation in time for declarer to guard against it.

It is a cardinal principle of bidding that you don't double when you may be jeopardizing the setting trick.

The double didn't hurt this time. West was sure of his two trump tricks anyway, but he slipped in the defense later on.

South won the heart lead and decided to attack the diamond suit before going after trumps. West rose with his ace of diamonds and led a second heart. South trumped in dummy, cashed dummy's ace of trumps just in case East might be holding one. Then he started to play more diamonds. He discarded a club on the third diamond lead.

West ruffed and led a club. South went right up with dummy's ace and discarded his last club on another diamond lead. West ruffed and led a second club but South was able to ruff in his own hand; draw trumps stopping in dummy and make the rest of the tricks with what was left of the diamond suit.

How could West have beaten the contract?

When he took his ace of diamonds he should have led a club rather than the second heart. Then when he ruffed for the first time he could have given his partner a club trick.

The Old and The New

Into the modern — so very new —
We step, and to the old—adieu,
The new—we look about it with pride,
But for the old we can't quite hide
The little feeling, tinge of regret
For in it are things we will never forget,
Some of us there began our careers,
There we have given so many years,
Of dedicated work night and day
Helping the newspaper along its way,
Seeking to serve the best we could
Working for projects we thought were good,
Loyal reporters tried with all their might
To give the best in the things they'd write,
So many people do they know.
Even by just printed word they grow
A symbol of service on which folks depend,
Creating goodwill, they are everyone's friend,
Close to the people, knowing their desires
This is their life—the things that inspires
A reporter, who with all their heart pursues
The work of trying to gather news;
Having the feel of it deep inside,
Listening often as people confide,
Knowing at once by faces grieved
During the war the word they'd received,
Writing our best for one and all
Really big stories, items real small,
Working with editors who have drawn
The maximum in us and spurred us on;
But in all departments was this attitude shared,
We who have served long really have cared,
Others worked hard at such things as these
Writing the ads they hoped would please,
Working long hours under pressure, too,
Thinking up ads that were fresh and new,
Printers and pressmen, business working as one,
All the departments for a job well done,
Striving to make circulation grow,
Watching new workers come and go,
Some mighty strong ties left by a few
With us who have stayed the long years through,
Joys, sorrows, hard work and fears
Are the things on which we have built our careers,
But now, at last, comes the dreamed of time,
We have left the building with dust and grime,
It is empty now and locked is the door,
The noise of the press will be heard no more,
But we whom it housed our entire career
Smile and glance backward, for we hold it dear,
It gave us memories that will never quite fade
Fun we have had, and friends we have made.
Yes, it was old and noisy and dirty
But it meant happy years as we write its last 30,
And now in our wonderful building at last
May we serve even better than we did in the past.

Letters to Editor

MRS. CHARLES H. GREEN (Route 2, Sedalia)—I recently read the news item appearing on the front page of the Sedalia-Capital, concerning the proposed Southwest Sewer Lagoon project. This article states 'survey work is not complete because some problems have been encountered with landowners at the site of the new lagoon.' We are one of these landowners in defense of our own farming operation.

To my knowledge, the exact location of this 80 acre tract for sewer lagoons has not been publicly announced by the city. I believe the citizens of Sedalia should know about this.

Last winter, the Burns and McDonnell Engineering firm decided that the city needs our best land, plus land from three adjoining farms, for its new sewage lagoon project. I wonder whether the citizens of Sedalia know that the city has the authority to go out into the county and compel the landowners to sell their land for something as distasteful as a sewer lagoon. I do not know how the city received such power but it does not seem right to me, considering that this is a land of individual freedom.

The news article did not mention the fact that this 80-acre tract for sewer lagoons will lie approximately ¼ mile from the city water works. Do the city water users want a lagoon that close to the water works? We understand there is no treatment plant planned for this raw sewage lagoon, consequently it will affect the picnicing and recreation facilities of the 'Covered Bridge' park, since the lagoon will be only about 150 yards from the park. Also it is bound to pollute Flat Creek and ruin the fishing there.

Another important indication that this 80-acre lagoon site is poorly located is the flooding of Flat Creek everytime an area upstream has a heavy rainfall. The flood current is very strong on our land at the proposed lagoon site. I feel this could be a menance to the health of the surrounding area, downstream from the lagoon, if there should be enough flooding to cause erosion of the banks of the lagoon with subsequent leakage or seepage of sewage and possible contamination of water for human or livestock consumption.

I would also like to point out that the recently proposed Southwest Sewage lagoon site would be located just about ½ mile south of the new Sedalia south sewage lagoon. I ask why these should both be located in our same rural community which is recently a fast growing area, in an excellent school district. I feel that one sewer lagoon is as much as any community should be forced to tolerate, and definitely not two!

In addition, our farm business will be ruined, as our farm will be cut in two, with the best of our land taken from the center of our farm. Of course without the land our barns and dairy building will be forever useless, and since our house will be perched on a hill overlooking a lagoon, our remaining property value will drop.

I am sure that anyone can understand, after reading this letter, why problems have been encountered with the landowners. And we are still hoping that the city will reconsider and try to locate a more remote, more sanitary, and less productive farming area for their proposed 80 acre lagoon project, regardless of the recommendations of Burns and McDonnell Engineers of Kansas City.

GEORGE B. BAXTER (Major, USAF, Chief, Information Division Whiteman AFB)—Congratulations on your move to a new plant and new process. The new press certainly prints an excellent paper as we found when you ran off our first copy of the Whiteman Monitor.

Best wishes for continued success and a better Democrat-Capital in all ways.

Looking Backward

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Donald Davenport, member of Smith-Cotton faculty for 14 years, has accepted a position to teach in the Hinsdale, Ill., high school. He will leave Sedalia before September 1. Davenport came here from Maryville in 1927 and assisted Al Buschman as coach of the basketball and football teams. He later became head coach.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The S.S.C. club met at the home of Dr. Cord Bohling on South Kentucky avenue, at which time the following officers were elected: President, Frances Glover; Vice-President, Maruine Bohling; Secretary, Valeria Luetgen; Treasurer, Frances Donaldson. Dorothy Jean Russell of Kansas City, was a special guest.

What They Say

STUART SYMINGTON (Missouri's Senior U.S. Senator)—The success of our democratic way of government depends first on our being well-informed; secondly, on the people advising their elected representatives of their views on governmental matters. To that end, letters from constituents on matters of interest to them are an important part of the legislative process.

The most helpful letters are those which express not only the writer's position for or against a proposed measure, but also his reasons for that position, and how the legislation in question, if enacted, would affect him personally.

Letters of that character are of real value to those of us who must weigh all ramifications of every bill in the effort to make the best possible decision.

THE HARTFORD COURTANT: Wives' Earnings.--

The wives and moonlighting husbands are formand a new patterin society that has its drawbacks. But the lack of moonlight and roses in such a busy existence is more than made up, in the opinion of the workers, by the rise in the standard of living that a bigger income allows. With two-car families giving way to three-car families, it takes more cash to keep out of debt. At first a bigger income is justified on the ground that it is necessary to give the children a better education. Then the new standard of living becomes habitual, and the family finds itself caught in a routine in which hard work and long hours are inescapable.

The Women's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor reports that nearly half of all women 18 to 64 years of age work. About three out of five of them are married and living with their husbands. Nearly all contribute to family income. It is often the wife's earnings that raise family income above poverty levels. And, surprisingly, it is at the middle-income level that the largest proportion of wives are in the labor force.

The high proportion in the upper brackets who work is puzzling until it is realized that many are career women who have been trained in professions and prefer them to housework. The Bureau found that the higher the annual family income, the greater is the likelihood that the wife is in the labor force. The participation of wives in the work force was highest in 1965 in families with incomes of $12,000 to $15,000. If a wife worked the year around, the median per cent of family income accounted for by her earnings was 37 per cent. In a quarter of working families the wife accounted for 40 per cent or more of the family income. If this is one result of women's independence, few of them seem to regret it.

Nicklaus Places Second

Roberto De Vicenzo Wins British Open

HOYLAKE, England (AP) — Roberto de Vicenzo, 44-year-old golfing gaucho from the Argentine, climaxed 20 years fruitless trying Saturday and beat out defending titleholder Jack Nicklaus by two strokes for the British Open Championship.

He won it dramatically, standing off tremendous pressure and gambling to the end.

The balding, bull-shouldered internationalist, runner-up in 1950 and third four times in a campaign that started in 1948, fired a final round 70 over the Royal Liverpool links for a 72-hole score of 278, ten under par.

Nicklaus, the Golden Bear from Columbus, Ohio, who won the American Open just a month ago, gave it a charge but never managed to move closer than two shots of the Latin American. Big Jack rolled in a 25-foot putt on the 72nd hole for a 69, and a finishing score of 280.

The winning purse was only $4,880, small by U.S. standards, but qualified De Vincenzo for the $100,000 World Series at Akron, Ohio.

It was strictly a two-man battle over the closing holes on the 6,995- yard, par 72 Royal Liverpool links as Gary Player of South Africa, in second place two strokes back at the start of the day, encountered early putting troubles.

The little star from Johannesburg, three-putting the 10th and landing in a fairway bunker at the 18th, struggled home with a 74 for 284 and a tie for third money with England's sensation, 22-year-old Clive Clark. Clark had a closing 72.

It was a thrilling climax as De Vicenzo battled to hold on to his lead. At one stage he was four strokes ahead of Nicklaus but the margin narrowed and the tension mounted for a British gallery that appeared partisan to the aging Argentine.

The high point came at the 16th hole.

First, Nicklaus birdied the par five hole, cutting the Argentinian's lead to two shots.

De Vicenzo, playing just behind Jack, drove to the right and there was a vast expanse of out of bounds territory awaiting a gambling or wayward shot. De Vicenzo chose to gamble.

He took out a wood and lofted the ball over the trouble to the heart of the green. He two-putted for a matching birdie and that appeared to be the clincher.

Five Bouts Slated For Tuesday

Five big wrestling bouts will be presented at Convention Hall Tuesday night, with a 'death match' struggle highlighting the action.

Booked for that gruelling event are the powerful Stomper and the Viking, longtime rivals and two of the most feared heavyweights on the area scene.

Rules for the death match provide that falls don't count, the disqualification rule is waived, and the action will continue until one of the contestants is no longer able to keep pace.

The 265-pounder Stomper purposely asked for the showdown in an effort to settle an old grudge with the Viking. The big fellow still has a scar on his arm that was inflicted by the Viking over a year ago.

At the time, the Viking was wearing a Norseman's helmet with horns attached as part of his regalia. Following a hard-fought test with the Stomper, he grabbed the helmet and cut the Stomper's arm with one of the horns.

'Every time I look at that scar, all I can think of is getting even,' the Stomper declared. 'That's why I asked for the death match.'

The second half of the double main event will send two mixed tag teams into action. Husky Ronnie Etchison will side with curvy Betty Niccoli to oppose the Hangman and stocky Verne Bottoms in the team clash.

Ronnie Reed, popular Baltimore wrestler, also will be on the scene Tuesday. He's pitted against hard-hitting Jack Donovan.

Finley To Hold Discussion With KC Officials

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Charles O. Finely, owner of the Kansas City Athletics, will meet with Kansas City officials to discuss the future of major league baseball in that city, the Birmingham News reported Saturday.

"I'm going over to Kansas City, probably next week, and see what they have to say," Finely told the news. "I certainly owe them that consideration. I've written them that I will meet with them.

"I have nothing more to say on the subject, and that's that," he added.

Dutton Brookfield, chairman of the Jackson Couty sports complex authority in Kansas City, had said Friday he was disturbed because Finley had ignored efforts of the authority to negotiate on installing the Athletics in the baseball end of a $43 million two-stadium complex.

The Kansas City owner has denied published reports Finley was planning to move his baseball team to Milwaukee.

Sedalia will get a treat on September 22, when the Southern Methodist University Mustangs come to Sedalia to practice on Friday afternoon for their game with the University of Missouri Tigers at Columbia on Saturday. Accomodations are becoming such in Sedalia, that our city is becoming more and more widely known for such visits. It means more visitors to our City and money spent here will eventually "rub off" on all local business.

Fortunately the Smith-Cotton Tigers will be playing Friday night in Jefferson City with it's oldest rivals the Jays. This makes it possible for the Jennie Jayes Stadium gridiron to be open for the Mustangs to 'warm-up' for Saturday.

Already the Holiday Inn is receiving requests for reservations, the team has already been booked in for that weekend.

The Sedalia School Board was quick to cooperate when they learned the Mustangs desired to make Sedalia their Friday night stop before invading Columbia. The Board did not hesitate to grant permission for the visitors to use the gridiron.

Sedalia's hospitality will no doubt be such that it will be told to many, many people and we shall see more coming here.

Tennis in Sedalia has been picking up the past several years, but what amazes me is how the sport has failed to have a tournament sponsored here. There are Tennis tournaments in Marshall, Warresnburg, Lexington and other Central Missouri towns, in which many of the locals have participated.

In recent weeks there have been several, the most recent at Marshall, where the 10 single matches played had six Sedalians and one former Sedalian playing.

Also of the six trophies offered three of them were brought back to Sedalia, Bill Cook, winning the Singles Championship, and the other two second place trophies going to Cook and Jack Taylor who teamed together in the doubles, only to lose to the Nelsons, Bruce and Roger of Warrensburg.

Sedalia could stand one of those hot tennis tournaments like in the good old days say the early thirties and mid twenties. Those days they played on clay courts, now days we have the asphalt courts and cement courts at Liberty Park, and even today they are being kept fairly well busy.

Motorcycles Set to Race at Mo. State Fair

Two motorcycle racing events will be featured at this year's Missouri State Fair, Sedalia, August 19-27- Amateur and expert races August 25, and the second annual Motorcycle Classic, August 27. The total prize money for each of the two events is $2,000.

The trials for the amateur and expert races will begin at 1 p.m., August 25, with races at 2 p.m. Both races will be held on the one-mile dirt track at the fairgrounds, under sanction number 581 of the American Motorcycle Association.

Amateur riders will compete in four separate races, and experts will have a total of five race events.

'Since there are no other motorcycle races in the midwest, we expect over 100 riders at each race date,' said Don Scanlan, of Scanlan's Racing Promotions St. Joseph.

The second annual Motorcycle Classic at the Missouri State Fair will have time trials at 7 p.m., August 27, with races at 8 p.m. A total of our novice events, four amateur events, and two expert events will be held on the half-mile dirt track at the fairgrounds. All events are sanctioned by sanction number 582 of the AMA.

At last year's fair, seven national champion riders competed in the motorcycle races: Bert Markel, Babe DeMay, Fred Nix, Darrell Dovel, Neil Keen, Ted Davis, and Joe Messaros. There were about 30 riders from the midwest alone, Scanlan said.

Official entry forms may be obtained from Scanlan Racing Promotions, 3001 North Ninth St., St. Joseph, Mo.

His Seventh Victory

Damascus Surges For Dwyer Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Damascus, surging from last place turned back the bid of lightly regarded Favorable Turn in the home stretch, won the $83,350 Dwyer Handicap at Aqueduct Saturday and remained the horse to beat for the 3-year-old title.

Under topweight of 128 pounds, Damascus carried the white and red dotted silks of Mrs. Edith Bancroft over the sloppy 1¼ miles in 2:03 for his seventh victory, six in stakes, in 10 outings this year.

With Bill Shoemaker using his whip liberally through the final one quarter mile, the son of Sword Dancer-Kerala hit the finish line three quarters of a length in front of Herbert Allen's surprising Favorable Turn. It was another 2½ lengths back to John M. Schiff's Blasting Charge, who beat Fort Drum by a head for third money.

As the strong choice of the crowd of 44,451, Damascus paid $3, $2.80 and $2.40. Favorable Turn, running his best race of the year with Ron Turcotte in the saddle, returned $11.20 and $6.20 while Blasting Charge paid $4.40.

Although seven lengths back midway of the backstretch Shoemaker said he never was worried.

"I had an easy running horse down the backstretch," he said. "There wasn't any place to go inside when we hit the half-mile pole so we went outside."

Rounding the last turn, Damascus made his strong move and, with one-quarter-mile remaining, was second, only a length off the front running Favorable Turn.

"My horse just smothered the field on the turn, all except Favorable Turn" Shoemaker said. "When we straightened away I thought we'd beat him easy. My horse didn't tire but neither did Favorable Turn."

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Barber, once Baltimore's ace lefty, stopped Cleveland on four hits Saturday and recorded his first victory as a New York Yankee, a masterful 4-1 conquest of the Indians.

Barber, 28, a one-time Oriole mainstay, came to the Yankees in a trade July 4, and lost his first outing.

They finally broke through against him in the seventh—the first Cleveland run in 23 innings—on a lead off triple by Duke Sims and and infield out.

By that time, however, the Yankees had pecked out a four run lead in the game that was delayed twice by rain.

Steve Whitaker started it with a solo homer in the second and the Yanks added two more in the third.

CHICAGO (AP) — Jimmie Hall drove in two runs with a pair of singles to help support Jack Hamilton's strong pitching Saturday as the California Angels knocked off the Chicago White Sox 4-1.

The Sox, yielding two unearned runs in a three-run fourth inning, had their American League lead trimmed to 1½ games as second-place Minnesota downed Kansas City 3-2.

Hamilton, a husky right-hander acquired from the New York Mets last month, needed last out help from relief ace Minnie Rojas after checking the White Sox on five hits through 8 2-3 innings.

Loser Bruce Howard, 3-7, lasted six innings before John Buzhardt and Don McMahon came on to check the Angels but the damage had been done due to faulty fielding in the fourth.

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (AP) — Harmon Killebrew led off the ninth inning with his second home run of the game and Tony Oliva followed with another homer, lifting the Minnesota Twins past Kansas City 3-2 Saturday.

The tying and winning homers were hit on consecutive pitchers by reliever Jack Aker, who had come on in the ninth to protect a 2-1 lead.

Lew Krausse and rookie Tony Pierce held the Twins to four hits until Killebrew blasted his 26th homer — tops in the majors — and Oliva connected for his ninth of the year.

The A's, who stole seven bases in the game — one short of a major league mark — jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first inning against Dean Chance, capitalizing on an error, a walk, four stolen bases and Ramon Webster's two run single.

With one out in the first, Mike Hershberger was safe on an error, then stole second. Chance walked John Donaldson and Hershberger and Donaldson pulled a double steal.

BOSTON (AP) — Joe Foy started a triple play in the first inning and led Boston's attack with a single, double and triple Saturday as the Red Sox defeated the slumping Baltimore Orioles 5-1.

Luis Aparico and Russ Snyder led off the game for Baltimore by drawing walks, and both runners were moving when Paul Blair lined a 3-2 pitch right at Foy.

The Boston third baseman caught the ball and fired to second baseman Mike Andrews, who touched the bag and threw to first baseman George Scott to easily complete the triple play.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Frank Howard, who had struck out five straight times in the last two games, lashed a two-run single to cap a three-run rally in the seventh inning that gave Washington a 3-2 victory over Detroit Saturday, extending the Senators' winning streak to six games.

Mickey Lolich, who had pitched out of several jams, had a 2-0 lead and two out in the seventh when the Senators struck. Bernie Allen singled to right, pinch hitter Doug Camilli followed with a single to center and Tim Cullen drove in a run with another single.

National League

CINCINNATI (AP) — Mel Queen, a former outfielder, fashioned a sparkling six-hitter Saturday and pitched the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-1 victory over the New York Mets.

Queen, who had a no-hitter going until John Sullivan and Tom Reynolds stroked pinch hit singles in the sixth, broke a personal three-game losing string and pushed his record to 9-4.

The Reds, meanwhile, had clipped starter Tom Seaver for a quick run in the first inning on successive singles by Floyd Robinson, Vada Pinson and Pete Rose.

They knocked the young right-hander out in the fifth with three runs. Seaver walked Robinson and then, after getting two out, yielded successive doubles to Tony Perez and Deron Johnson. A single by Lee May off reliever Ron Taylor drove in the final run of the inning.

It is not likely Mays will make the Giants' upcoming road trip to Pittsburgh and Chicago, the club said.

Sharp Quiz Of Marshal

WASHINGTON (AP) — For Thurgood Marshall, it was almost like pleading the Fifth Amendment on the Fifth Amendment.

The nominee to the Supreme Court was asked at a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing Friday how he interpreted the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution, which prevents an individual from being required to incriminate himself in testimony.

Marshall declined to answer on grounds that "any statement I made construing the Fifth Amendment would require me to disqualify myself" from future Supreme Court cases on the subject.

The first Negro nominated to the high court again refused to give his over-all opinion of Supreme Court rulings on confessions — a refusal which, for the second consecutive day, appeared to irritate some Southern Democratic members of the committee.

"If you don't have any opinion on what the Constitution means, you ought not to be confirmed," snapped Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C.

Marshall, now U.S. solicitor general, suggested committee members check his previous opinions as a U.S. Appeals Court judge or his briefs as solicitor general to learn his views.

WA majority of the committee already has spoken in favor of Marshall's confirmation by the Senate.

Enrollment For Medicare Set

Persons over 65 who have not signed up for Medicare can sign up for the medical insurance part of Medicare in October, November and December, according to C. Kent Charles, Social Security district manager.

The initial period for anyone reaching 65 to sign up begins three months before the month he reaches 65 and ends three months after that month. Enrollment at 65 or later means protection will not begin until one to three months later.

The next general enrollment period is the last three months of 1967.

Charles stated that premiums three months before the month to sign up during a general enrollment period and protection wll not begin until six to nine months after enrollment. Persons cannot sign up at all if they fail to do so within three years of their first opportunity.

Sweater Girl Has Changed

NEW YORK (AP) — A lot always happened to sweater girls. They were said to have "oomph," and seldom went unnoticed.

A lot has happened to the sweater, itself. It has evolved a sweater dress occasionally only long enough to cover the subject, and eventually into an entire industry of knitwear.

A woman whose name just happens to be Lotte had a show for the nation's fashion press Friday which indicates how far the sweater evolution has gone. Her knitwear collection which wound up a week of previews for the American press demonstrated some new tricks that grandmother's knitting needles never could exercise.

Taking rabbits hair, and wool, Lotte's machine needles whipped up reversible textures in cross stitch ridges, diamond patterns and contrasting colors. They made bumpy surfaces and brushed plaids, and intricate floral prints as well as some surfaces as fine and thin and delicate as pastel linens.

These fabrics had been stitched into dress and coat ensembles, classical suits, and floppy hostess pajamas. Now and then they were trimmed with patches of cobra or banded by petals of snakeskin—a touch of eve which never occurred to grandmother.

The resulting clothes were high style, lightweight, packable garments that belong to today's world of women on the go.

How Long to Keep Them Is Her Spicy Problem

By POLLY CRAMER

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—I am so glad you have added the problem section to your column. It is a way to get our problems out in the open where someone who knows the answer can help.

My Scottish blood causes me to dislike throwing anything unused away if there is any way it can be used effectively. My question is, how long can spices be kept, properly stored, and still retain their full strength? Also, can a larger quantity of an older spice be used to get the same flavor as a smaller amount of a fresher one? If so, what extra proportion should be added?—BEVERLY

DEAR POLLY—I suggest that Bertha spray her shedding felt card table covers with hair spray. It will not make them stiff. I had a pelon (similar to felt) Christmas tree skirt, decorated with colored chalk and glitter, which I sprayed. The chalk did not rub off and the glitter stayed on.—D. M.

DEAR POLLY—I have found that one of the most thoughtful gifts one can give a person who has to be on crutches is a cobbler's apron. Flowers are lovely, but an apron with large pockets enables her to carry things from one place to another without having to call for help. I am recuperating from a broken ankle and, in my apron, I carry furniture polish and cloth, and keep the house shiny. I transport my knitting with me from room to room and even take small, freshly laundered clothes back to their proper storage place. Books, magazines, cigarettes—so many things can be carried when the hands are otherwise involved with crutches.—MIRIAM

DEAR POLLY—It is a good idea to carry a flashlight after dark to light one's way and for emergencies. In case one should fall and not be able to get up, the flashlight could be turned on and waved in the air to attract attention. Someone would surely see this beam of light and come to the rescue.—KATIE

Muriel Lawrence

By MURIEL LAWRENCE
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

DEAR MRS. LAWRENCE: My college student nephew is causing his parents terrible anxiety because of the approving way he spoke of LSD when he was home at Easter. When his father asked him outright if he had used it, he said that this was his "business." But he admitted that several of his friends were using it. He has always been unusually close to his father and mother but they feel they have now lost all his confidence. In God's name, if you know how to deal with this dangerous situation, please . . .

ANSWER: We deal with it by removing all our own self-accusation from it.

Because the probability is that we have dominated the child who uses or is tempted to use LSD. For his interest in it is a violent statement of his right to difference from us. Thus, the child in whose "closeness" to us we have taken great pride is apt to be the one who must most violently declare that he wants distance from us, to be free to disagree with us about everything from religion to sex. And he may use LSD to assert his right to this disagreeing distance.

If we can't know that our pleasure in his "well-adjusted," agreeable "closeness" to us has added up to domination of him, we're in trouble. We'll be in trouble the moment we start hating ourselves for dominating him. Unable to bear our self-accusation, we'll transfer this condemnation of ourselves to the child and resent him instead of perceiving what he's up to.

So we won't be able to quietly discuss his LSD interest with him. We won't be able to listen when he tells us what wonderfully spiritual experience the drug provides. We won't know we're being told that our child is concerned with spiritual experience. So we'll be unable to give him grateful appreciation of this concern. Unable to listen to his different notions on how we human beings acquire spiritual experience, we won't be listened to when we say mildly:

"What you say sounds fascinating. However, darling, we know a chemist who believes that LSD can cause brain damage. Would you mind if we invited him to dinner so that we could explain his reasons for believing this to all of us? What he says is fascinating, too. And after all, discovering God is hard enough without trying to do it with a damaged brain."

If you people can't pull free enough of self-accusation to grant the boy his different notions, dangerous though they seem to you, then you must persuade him to see a psychiatrist.

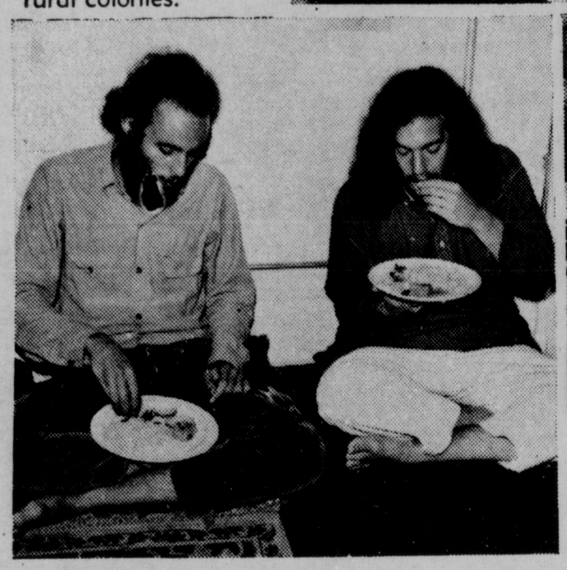
WHITHER GOEST, HIPPIES?

The hippie movement is spreading all over the U.S., but mecca for the "flower children" is still the Haight - Ashbury district in San Francisco. Yet even in this hippie headquarters the rebels against materialism are becoming big business, as big money moves in to capitalize on curiosity. Many hard - core hippies are moving out to seek nature in rural colonies.

Oriental religions greatly influence many hippies. Main philosophy for all flower children is a doctrine of peace and love.



Sustenance for hippies is as uncomplicated as possible. Income may be from selling trinkets, or in the case of the girl at left, psychedelic literature. Eating is a relaxed affair, uncluttered by tables, chairs, or silverware. One form of entertainment is a community theater which gives free plays in the Golden Gate Park, above. Scorned by most of society, the hippie movement is nevertheless widespread. "Psychedelic" is now a household word, and its implications of consciousness-expansion influence today's advertising, fashion and teen-age music.

Bob Hope, his baby-sitter, Golda (Phyllis Diller) look forward to spending a wad of dough which he found outside a supermarket. But there's a catch. An amount equal to which he found is missing from the bank where he works as a teller. "Eight On The Lam," a United Artists release in Color by De Luxe, opens Sunday at the F.O.X. Theatre.

Monster Movies Are Hits

TOKYO (AP) — For a people who love the delicate beauty of flower arranging and tea ceremonies, the Japanese can dream up some of the most nightmarish monsters ever projected on movie screens.

The reasons are simple: Monster films are hits and great money makers.

For example, there's Gilala, a 15,000-ton refugee from outer space. It emits strong thermal rays — more powerful than nuclear weapons — from its sucking disks and hands. Built into its neck is a superradar which can detect any phenomenon on earth.

Gilala is 197 feet tall. As if that isn't enough, it's got big round baby-pink eyes, no teeth and a piercing falsetto that makes listeners' hair stand on end.

Then there's Gappa. A Gappa is a triphibian born on a South Pacific island and capable of cruising undersea faster than a nuclear-powered submarine and flying faster than a Mach-2 jet.

Like Gilala, a Gappa emits death rays. But a Gappa can also belch flames from its mouth and melt buildings with temperatures of 4,000 degrees centigrade.

A Gappa's body resembles a dragon. But female Gappas have a distinctive extra touch: luminous pearl-like beads on their toes so bright they blind anyone who gazes at them.

This monster-mania started with Godzilla, an oversized dinosaur, who achieved international stardom in 1954 by kicking down several Japanese cities and scaring theater audiences out of their wits.

Godzilla was followed by a menagerie of tyrannosaurs, Dinosaurs, Triceratops, Ceratesaurs, Pterodactyls and often mixed off-springs of the lot.

All of them stomped through cities. Several were amazingly talented: They could fly, walk and swim at superspeeds.

Tokyo, by loose count, was destroyed at least a dozen times by the monsters. Picturesque Kyoto and industrial Osaka — two cities popular with tourists — also were kicked into the dust several times.

In one movie, a child falls in love with Gamera. As the film reaches its climax, Gamera — almost with tears in its ugly eyes — drags a troublesome rival up the slopes of Mt. Fuji and dumps it into the volcanic crater to save the youngster.

'Behave Yourself' Their Hygiene Code

CHICAGO (AP) — Man may not be able to live on bread alone, but he can make out quite well, thanks, on fruits, vegetables, nuts and dairy products. At least that's how members of the American Natural Hygiene Society feel about it.

In fact, members consider some other foods quite literally "poison." These include some pretty popular items — meat, fish, liquor, beer, commercial products.

Their diet must be supplemented by an entire program of hygienic practices including regular exercise, sunbathing, rest and even fasting.

The group's 19th annual convention in Chicago, a nine-day meeting, has attracted health enthusiasts from across the country. Many feel they are alive today only because of their faithfulness to the program.

Director Jack Trop, 67, said that he and many other members came over to the natural hygiene way as a last resort.

"A number of these people — as well as I — were told by doctors that we had only a short period of time to live," he said.

The audience looked very lively indeed. There were no fatties in the crowd and several of the elderly people were remarkably alert and energetic.

Trop continued, "We offer no magic potions. We believe the only way to get well is to behave yourself. There is no secret. Our plan is as old as the hills. A little wisdom and the wonderful powers of the human body are enough to take care of you."

Although Trop said the group is not opposed to medical men or medical practices, hygienists would rather try conservative measures before submitting to drugs or surgery.

He hastened to add that the program could not, of course help individuals suffering from terminal diseases.

He did, however, say that "the group considers disease not an enemy, but a friend, a warning. The body is saying, 'lie down, relax — to give me a chance to straighten you out' ".

Descendants Gather For A Reunion

The descendants of John Anton Schupp met June 25 for their 20th annual reunion and basket dinner at noon in Liberty Park. Fifty-five persons were present.

The youngest was six-month-old Daryl Gilmore, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Gilmore, of Otterville, and the eldest was C. C. Schupp, 82, of 1909 South Park, Sedalia. Mr. Schupp also has the distinction of being the only member of the family who has been present for all of the 20 annual get-togethers.

During the business meeting, conducted by the president, Paul Repper, of Otterville, these officers were elected: A. W. Gilmore, president; Mrs. George Naylor, Sedalia, vice-president; and Otto Schupp, Sedalia, secretary-treasurer.

Mrs. A. F. Berkey, Sedalia, family historian, conducted a ceremony with roses during which she asked one member of each branch of the family to add a rose to a vase already containing five roses, representing Anton Schupp, who came to Missouri from Germany in 1846, his wife, and their sons, William and Anton, and daughter, Charlotte.

Theological Skirmish

EDITOR'S NOTE—Bishop Kim Myers may consider himself a conservative theologian but you wouldn't think so from the stir he has caused in the few short months since he took over the Episcopal Diocese of California. His predecessor, the controversial Bishop James Pike, may not have been entirely kidding when he said, "It's going to be kind of nice that I'll be remembered as the last conservative bishop of California."

By JACK SCHREIBMAN

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Bishop C. Kilmer Myers, a quiet man with a background stretching from Hell's Kitchen to Nob Hill, is no stranger to controversy..

It's hardly startling, then, that the man who leads the Episcopal Diocese of California would have things stirred up among Episcopalians and other saiths.

It's nothing new for the Episcopal Diocese to be involved in a theological skirmish. Consider Bishop Myers' predecessor — Bishop James A. Pike.

Pike, who stepped out as bishop at the beginning of this year, was a Socratic intellectual, an outgoing, lively extrovert who cared about questions, answers, and liked lots of publicity. He got it, as one of the scrappiest battlers ever to flatten the grass in the fields of the Lord.

His friend of 25 years, "Kim" Myers, treads a lot more softly, finds it almost painful to talk about himself, but, no less than Pike, sees himself as an instrumentation of God whose moment has come.

A warm smile spread over Pike's face last September when a convention at Grace Cathedral elected Myers, 51, to succeed him.

The rumpled theologian congratulated the electors for their choice, leaned back in his chair, and said sweetly:

"As a matter of fact, now that you've elected Kim Myers it's going to be kind of nice that I'll be remembered as the last conservative bishop of California."

Pike was ribbing the electors in the sense that they had chosen the one man in the country who might turn out to be more lizeral than Pike on social concerns, the poor, civil rights and other matters.

Bishop Pike is now theologian-in-residence at the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, Santa Barbara, Calif.

Bishop Myers took over from the man who had challenged the doctrine of the Holy Trinity, saw "nothing special" in the birth of Christ, and found "not useful" the concept of the son of God.

Thus came the Rt. Rev. Chauncie Kilmer Myers to the grandly beautiful Grace Cathedral on Nob Hill, a penny's pitch from the Fairmont and Mark Hopkins hotels.

He came as the former "slum priest" who preached in New York City's Hell's Kitchen and the Lower East Side

He came with his wife, the former Katie Lea Stuart, as the substitute father of a Negro boy and as foster father to two Korean-American children who had been abandoned in their homeland by their GI fathers.

Albert Williams, the Negro boy, was in Bishop Myers' parish in New Jersey. The Williams family was large and there wasn't enough to feed all the mouths. The bishop reared the boy, who later repaid his white, priest-father's love by changing his name to Myers.

Today, 26 and married, Albert Myers serves in the Peace Corps in Malawi, Africa. Said Katie Myers of her Negro son: "He has been a source of pride and joy for us."

The Korean children, who live with the bishop, are Jonathan Ki, 14, and Laura Mercy, 9.

"They're Americanized with a vengeance," said their father.

Bishop Myers is still a little giddy over the reaction to his June 4 sermon in which he said Anglicans and Protestants should "acknowledge the Pope as chief pastor of the Christian family and we should joyfully acclaim him as the Holy Father in God of the universal church."

Christianity, he said, "needs a Holy Father. We need a father who can speak and witness to the whole human race."

"I would welcome the idea of one person who might be a spokesman for all Christians, but I don't think I'm ready to accept the bishop of Rome," said the Rt. Rev. Anson P. Stokes of the Massachusetts Episcopal Diocese.

"I think it premature" said Dr. Edgar N.S. Chanderl, ex-director of the Protestant Church Federation of Greater Chicago.

Roman Catholic clergy of the San Francisco Archdiocese welcomed Bishop Myers' words.

"The historical center of the Christian community in the west," said Bishop Myers in an interview, "has been the Holy See. This does not mean capitulate and crawl, as some people have said I have said."

On the doctrine of papal infallibility, a powerful concern in the minds of non-Roman Catholic Christians, the bishop said: "I could not accept papal infallibility."

He proceeded with a hint of amused testiness: "I don't think that doctrine has ever been carefully reflected on. Most Roman Catholics live their lives out without reference to papal infallibility. And I would expect that the Pope doesn't give it a thought from one day to the next."

The bishop has received no direct word from the Vatican on his sermon, he said, but he thinks encouragement has been given for a dialogue to get started.

Kim Myers' early life gave little evidence of what was to come. He was born into a middle class family in Schuylerville, N.Y. They followed the Dutch Reformed faith.

While at Rutgers University, majoring in sociology, Myers became interested in Episcopalianism. In 1937, after taking his bachelor's degree, he entered the Berkeley School in Connecticut to study theology.

He was graduated in 1940, ordained deacon in May and seven months later became a priest. Four years later he entered the U.S. Naval Reserve as a chaplain.

After his discharge, Myers joined the faculty of General Theological Seminary on West 20th Street in New York, just below Hell's Kitchen. It was a turning point.

"I began to feel the church ought to make a move toward filling the vacuum that had been created in intercity areas.

"The Episcopal Church, like all the others, had been moving out into the suburban areas of the cities. Many churches were abandoned, or going on one cylinder."

Ever since, Bishop Myers has been trying to fire up a few more cylinders. The church should "repent for our failure to remain among the poor."

Politically, Bishop Myers is a Democrat, but theologically he reckons himself a conservative.

Military Man Has Chance

By JOHN T. WHEELER

SAIGON (AP) —Despite the collapse of their early favorite for the presidency, amid a power struggle in the military junta, U.S. officials believe a military man has the best chance of succeeding in South Vietnam's top job.

Whatever the personal preferences of the policy makers, few observers can dispute their basic assumption that the military is the largest political force in the anti-Communist struggle here and that no government can expect to rule effectively without military support.

Also, some U.S. sources have expressed belief that many of the civilian politicians have shown themselves far out of touch with the realities of the war in the countryside and what must be done to gain the peasants' allegiance.

There is always the danger that any civilian president would be toppled in a coup. Such action would destroy the government's legitimacy, which U.S. policy considers an absolute must if the peasants are expected to rally to the government side and if the new regime is to earn respect abroad.

Since the dramatic and unexpected ouster of Premier Nguyen Cao Ky from the presidential race last month, the U.S. mission here is believed to be operating a good deal more cautiously. Ky was front runner in the race until Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu won support from key members of the military junta in a masterful power play. Thieu is a lieutenant general in the army, while Ky is an air vice marshal.

The U.S. mission, while taking a hands-off stance publicly, had been working actively behind the scenes for Ky on the grounds that he was most likely to win. Thieu's presidential candidacy was considered a threat to military unity, and the U.S. mission put pressure on the chief of state to withdraw. The mission's support of Ky may lead to difficulties in U.S.-Vietnamese relations if Thieu wins, as many expect he will.

Should You Take Your Children to Europe?

You Can Develop a Talent for Happiness By MARGARET COUSINS

Turn Summer Fruits into Luscious Desserts

ASK THEM YOURSELF

FOR JAMES WEBB, Director, National Aeronautics and Space Administration

● Distance in space used to be measured in light years. Since the number of light years it would take to reach the moon is astronomical, has this system been changed?—Joe Gleason, Jr., Biloxi, Miss.

● Light years are the distance light travels—at 186,272 miles a second—in a 12-month period. The greatest distance the moon ever gets from the earth is 252,710 statute miles, or less than two "light seconds." So a proposed trip to the moon has never been measured in light years. Our first manned journey to the moon in the Apollo spacecraft will take less than a week, round trip. But a round trip from earth to the nearest star (not counting our own sun) would take eight years even at the speed of light.

FOR ALLEN BROOKS, photographer

● You've been called "the new rage in advertising photography." What's your success story?—F. B., Sacramento, Calif.

● If my success, at 29, has been incredible, it's mainly due to the fact that I try to produce the kind of photograph that is as close to reality as possible. I don't use a gorgeous model with perfect looks. People want to see themselves in ads. The average man can't see himself in an overglamorized situation—which is murder for the product.

FOR BARBARA PARKINS of tv's "Peyton Place"

● Now that you're starring in the movie, "Valley of the Dolls," will you still be in "Peyton Place" regularly?—L. Lewis, Owensboro, Ky.

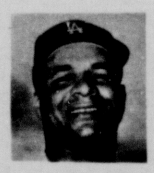
● The movie will in no way interfere with my appearances in "Peyton Place."



FOR ROY CAMPANELLA

● Do you have any children? Are they active in sports?—P. C., Amityville, N.Y.

FOR PAT BOONE

● Do you have a special formula for keeping the "young" look that you have?—Mrs. Charles E. Morrison, Ironton, Ohio

● I'm a great believer in athletics as a means of keeping young physically and mentally. Also, with four young daughters approaching teen age, I'm constantly exposed to current trends in music, dress, pop art, etc. This helps me to think young.

FOR PATRICIA KENT, author of "An American Woman and Alcohol"

● How many women alcoholics are there in the United States?—D. N., Pueblo, Colo.

● There are 1,500,000 women in the U.S. who are acknowledged alcoholics. But there are at least three times as many potential and "hidden" alcoholics—women who are protected by their families.

FOR JUDGE ROY HOFHEINZ, President, Houston Sports Association

● How much of the Houston Astrodome's success can be credited to the Astros baseball team?—J. N., Texas City, Tex.

● The Astrodome has proved to be a $160-million boon to Houston's economy, and it is estimated that 8,145,236 persons have come to see everything from baseball to Billy Graham. More than half of these visitors came to see the Astros, but the second-largest attendance has come from the guided tours, which proves the Astrodome's draw as an attraction in itself.

WHAT IN THE WORLD!

By ALLEN GARVIN

The Redcoats Are Coming The British are victims of a "brain drain"—their top professional men are being lured to the U.S. by high salaries. Solution: the English are coming over to lure the Yanks. "It's an organized drive, visas-in-the-dispatch-case sort of thing," says one official.

Batgirl Next season, a Batgirl is joining Batman in the lovely shape of Yvonne Craig (5 feet, 4 inches; 109 pounds). She is currently being measured for a fancy purple stretch jumpsuit, a purple cape, boots, her own utility belt full of crime-fighting gadgets, and a Bat-cycle. "Any romance between you and Robin?" she was asked. "Gosh, no," she answered. "He's only 15½!"

Batgirl spreads her wings

Nagging Machines In the house of tomorrow, the computer will do everything—and that includes nagging you. A show in New York previews what living will be like in 1999 with a household computer. There is instant push-button cooking, but if you dial a big lunch, the computer may reply that it adds up to more calories than it thinks are good for you!

Way-Out Weddings A 19-year-old go-go dancer was topless for her wedding. In Florida, they get married on water skis; in California, while free-fall parachuting. Says psychologist Dr. Joyce Brothers, "Psychologically, such weddings are manifestations of a number of things—not all of them bad. Everyone knows that strong mutual interests are factors in a rewarding marriage. A fellow and a girl willing to exchange vows while leaping out of an airplane are obviously made for each other."

Dr. Joyce Brothers

Robin Moore

Banned Berets? Author Robin (Green Berets) Moore claims the Pentagon is resisting attempts to turn his best seller into a movie. Despite government pressures, however, John Wayne insists on doing the film because, as Moore says, "He's a very gutsy, brave man." Why the pressure? "They told me that I had top secrets in my book. I told them there was nothing that the Communists didn't know. Why shouldn't we tell our own people?"

YOU CAN DEVELOP A TALENT FOR HAPPINESS

By MARGARET COUSINS
Author of "Christmas Gift," "Stories of Love and Marriage," "Traffic with Evil," etc.

This noted author tells how you can discover and nurture the most precious gift of all

I WENT TO SEE "poor dear Isabelle" a few years ago.

My friend, a woman who had always led a sheltered and secure life, had been deprived by death and various accidents of fortune of most of the amenities.

Economic necessity had forced her from her gracious background into a mean little room in a shabby neighborhood and into whatever employment she could get, for she was untrained. The loss of social opportunity and many so-called "friends" was intrinsic in the reduction of her standard of living.

Expecting to commiserate with her for her troubles and cheer her up, I arrived in a mood I can only think of now as patronizing. In spite of her aching feet, Isabelle was not only chipper but positively merry and as winning and entertaining as ever before.

Somewhat dashed by the failure of my Lady Bountiful mission, I said, looking around the dark little cubbyhole. "Well, Isabelle, I don't see how you can find happiness in a place like this!"

Isabelle turned her serious face to me. "I hunt it," she said.

The upshot of this occasion was that Isabelle cheered me up and I recognized, possibly for the first time, that there is such a thing as a talent for happiness.

Most people are equipped with many more talents than they make the effort to develop, and so the talent for happiness must exist in millions who choose to ignore it, fail to nurture it, or stifle it through ignorance. Just as a musician must consistently practice and develop technique to make glorious music, so must people who cherish happiness explore and exercise whatever gift they have for it.

Almost everyone who has arrived at maturity knows that genuine happiness is not the product of material possessions, power, fame, popularity, success, or any of the classic motivations assigned for obtaining it. Happiness is a do-it-yourself art.

It is impossible "to make someone happy," and promises of this sort are footless. Nor can someone make you happy. Efforts to acquire happiness by possessing or being possessed by another are as doomed to failure as efforts to secure happiness by ownership of the world's goods. No sacrifice of any proportion will make this work.

Nor is happiness the inevitable result of optimism. It is quite possible to be optimistic without being happy and vice versa. Optimism is a comfortable characteristic, but baseless optimism may be simply frivolous. A Pollyanna tendency "to look on the bright side" in the teeth of distressing facts, instead of instituting a positive program for remedying them, can lead to disaster.

The talent for happiness encompasses far more than the doubtful magic of an improved tomorrow. True happiness is concerned with today—the bird that lights on the passing moment. As Benjamin Franklin said, "Human felicity is produced not so much by great pieces of good fortune that seldom happen as by little advantages that occur every day."

How do you detect a talent for happiness in yourself? The best way would be to study the people you know who seem to be happy.

In my own research, I have chosen my sample from the people I am glad to see coming. When I observe a friend approaching me in the street and have the impetus to run forward and meet him, he has almost invariably turned out to be a person with this talent.

Among my old and even well-loved friends, there are people who have a positive talent for unhappiness, and when I see them coming I am impelled to cross the street to avoid a meeting. This may sound churlish, but it is possible to be fond of people without wanting to be treated to an unwarranted tale of woe.

In my survey, I have also found that people who exhibit the talent are oriented toward others and not centered on themselves. One and all, they offer a generosity of spirit and a democracy of interests. This provides them with limitless horizons instead of the narrow and airless cell of the self.

People whose entire existences center on themselves are too busy pursuing private advantages to pursue happiness. The elusive transient goes by while they are looking in the other direction.

Happy people always seem to me to be well-intentioned. While perverse practitioners of mean intentions may succeed, they are strangers to happiness—which depends heavily on a good conscience.

Another aspect of happy people is an abiding satisfaction in one's work. Such work does not have to bulk large on the world's horizons. It must only seem important to the person who is doing it. People who do not respect what they do are most unlikely to be satisfied by anything else. Leisure is never the guarantor of happiness, and unoccupied people are often the most dismal.

Finally, the talent for happiness seems always to incorporate the will to act, to make an effort, to invite and encourage and earn it. Far too many of us expect happiness to descend on us like a benison from heaven. It derives from an inner resource which is up and doing.

If you have these minimal qualifications, you probably have the talent; it is only up to you to exercise it to be happy. The direction that such exercise may take is a highly individual matter.

You can hardly go wrong by developing a sense of awareness. This boils down to looking and listening and observing and storing up impressions—to developing and refining the senses so that the myriad aspects of the everyday experience register and react upon you.

Millions of people go through life with their eyes closed and their ears plugged up, their noses neutral, and their tactile sense obliterated, so that much that is happiness-making is lost on them.

If you are standing at the sink washing vegetables, you may be bored and discontented when you could be awe-inspired at the color, conformation, design, and sheer miracle of a head of lettuce. When you observe how a head of lettuce is put together and recollect all that happens between the dropping of the infinitesimal seed and the closing of your hand upon the ultimate product, it is impossible to be bored.

Happiness is the product of the materials at hand. The talent for it is the ability to use what is available instead of expending energy yearning for what is not available. A disciplined imagination is an excellent tool. The development of the imagination goes hand in hand with the development of the talent. The sentient memory is another tool. The recollection of a moment of blazing happiness may give you as much pleasure 20 years later.

Another exercise which strengthens the talent is the development of what I call confidence in life. The ability to trust others as well as oneself and to accept one's limitations and those of others lays a firm structure for contentment.

I was reading a clutch of poems written by a young friend of mine the other day. They were filled with brilliant imagery and displayed a fine sure hand for the literary craft. But they were so saturated with melancholy and doom that I could scarcely rally myself at their conclusion. I am aware that such subject matter attracts the young, since mortality for them lies far in the future, but I found these actually terrifying.

"Why are you so unhappy?" I asked her.

"How can anybody be any other way?" she demanded and launched into the stereotyped tirade about the state of the world. When I agreed with her, her despair deepened. She would have preferred opposition.

"If you feel that way," she demanded, "how can you even pretend to be happy?"

"I am happy every time I get a chance," I told her. "I seize on the moment because this is the only time I will ever have to be alive."

My friend assumed her Dostoevski expression. "Life is terrible," she informed me.

"But it is preferable to the alternative," I said, realizing all over again how good the world can be, how beautiful the firmament, how remarkable the very gift of life.

I remembered being thrown from a horse long ago into a nettle of prickly pear, getting up shakily from the ground with my face full of cactus spines—and experiencing a moment of supreme happiness to be alive! Consider that access of pure joy you experience when an aching tooth suddenly stops! If you want to be happy, you can find the way.

The talent for happiness is usually founded in common sense. ◆

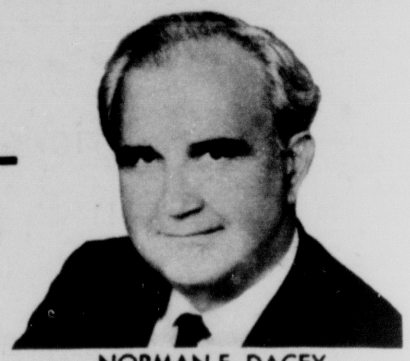
Americans work harder than any other people on earth to make adequate financial provision for their families after they are gone—BUT much of their hard-earned money is wasted, siphoned off by a scandalous probate system before it ever reaches their loved ones



NORMAN F. DACEY

Why Haven't You and Your Family Been Told These Facts?

- On average, it takes one to five years to close out an estate. During that time your spouse can draw a pitifully-small "widow's allowance" but your children can't draw a cent.
- It costs three to ten times as much proportionately to settle a poor man's estate as that of a millionaire.
- Under the existing probate system, complete strangers may share your estate with your family.

But, in the next 60 seconds I will tell you of an astonishingly simple way to transfer absolutely everything you now own to your loved ones after your death without delay, without red tape and without the excessive probate costs which your estate may otherwise be called upon to bear.

If you don't take the steps I suggest, my advice to you is "Don't die," because complications will start the moment you do. Your estate will come under the jurisdiction of a special court. Sometimes called the "orphans," "chancery" or "surrogate" court, its most common name is "probate" court. If you've left no will, it will dictate one for you in accordance with your state's law which won't necessarily read as you would wish. Now your children can start their long one-to-five-year wait to get what is left of their inheritance after the appraiser fees, executor or administrator fees and probate court costs are deducted.

THE UGLY SIDE OF PROBATE

Senator Robert F. Kennedy recently charged that courts handling probate are "shot through with scandal, scandal that has been documented over the years."

Fiorello LaGuardia called the probate system "the most expensive undertaking establishment in the world." The New York Herald-Tribune editorially denounced those "clubhouse lawyers" who "profit to the extent of one million dollars annually in fees, many taken, at a large percentage, from small guardianships where every dollar is needed." The Bridgeport Post called the probate system a "gravy train." An article in the Journal of the American Bar Association called the Connecticut probate system "one of the most viciously corrupt."

Probate judges on average are the highest paid judges in America. Many of them work on percentage and may earn more than the governors of their states. The income of one judge was 20% higher than that of the Chief Justice in Washington.

The clerk of a Chicago probate court appointed 691 "special guardians" in a nine-month period. One of his friends got 76 guardianships—an average of two a week. A probate judge has reported that 90% of the appraisers appointed by a probate court perform no service whatever for the fee they receive. Many conscientious members of the bar are worried about the corruption built into our probate system but most lack the courage to speak out.

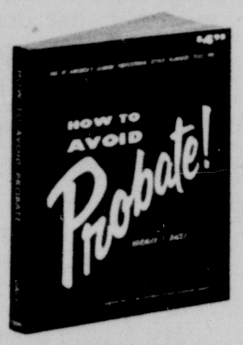
It is up to you to do something to help yourself. Sooner or later some of your own family's money will be involved. Don't wait and let your family and your children face this problem. Learn now how to avoid the probate system.

THE MAGIC KEY TO AVOID PROBATE

How can you give your loved ones the very maximum estate in the very minimum time after you have gone? By avoiding probate. Yes, virtually everything you now own can be quickly and easily transferred to your heirs after your death—and exactly as you specify, without any red tape, without publicity, without strangers meddling in your affairs and draining off the financial security you worked so hard to build for your family.

You can achieve all this very simply by a method which few laymen know about called an "inter vivos" or "living" trust. Indeed, only a small proportion of lawyers fully understand its use—the American Bar Association has just issued a training film to be shown to local bar associations to educate them on its advantages.

Even the manufacture of this book is extraordinary. It is not even printed on regular book paper. Norman F. Dacey has insisted that it be printed on the highest quality bond paper suitable for the important legal forms it contains (and which you will be able to fill in), so that these will last over one hundred years.



It's amazingly simple: Let's assume that you own a piece of real estate which you wish to leave to your wife at your death. In a simple "declaration of trust" you say in part: "I declare that I am holding this property in trust for my wife. Upon my death my successor trustee is to turn the property over to the beneficiary and terminate this trust. I hereby appoint as successor trustee the beneficiary hereunder." Upon your death, your wife, acting in her capacity as successor trustee, simply turns the property over to herself as beneficiary. She is then immediately the complete and absolute owner of the property. That's all there is to it—no executor's fees, no appraiser's fees, no probate court cost. No one-to-five-year wait. No piece in the paper telling all your business.

VITAL IF YOU OWN A SMALL BUSINESS

Passing on a small business, incorporated or unincorporated, to relatives or employees is extremely important. If necessary, your business can be quickly sold by the beneficiary-trustee if that is your and their wish. Otherwise, it could be tied up in probate court for years. A distress sale under probate procedures may produce little or nothing . . . may even create obligations. With an "inter vivos" trust, your successor trustee can quietly, privately and immediately investigate possible buyers . . . then take his time to make the deal that will give your family the very maximum, with no undesirable publicity to harm the sale.

WHY THIS BOOK IS AMERICA'S NO. 1 BEST SELLER

I wrote this book to tell a few friends and clients how to avoid probate. They told their friends . . . and now it has zoomed to the top of the best-seller list because Americans everywhere are discovering that it frees them from the bondage of the iniquitous probate system.

In it you will find an explanation of why it is vitally important to you and your family that you avoid probate. Next, you'll find the actual trust instruments needed to exempt your home or other real estate, your savings or checking account, your stocks, your mutual fund shares, your small unincorporated business, your close corporation . . . even your personal effects such as jewelry, antiques, paintings, etc.

With each instrument are instructions that even a school child can understand, and a picture of how the instrument should look when it is completed. All of the instruments are specially perforated for easy removal from the book and actual use.

In addition, you'll find precise advice on a wide range of family financial planning decisions which you are called upon to make on matters of life insurance, taxes, investments and the like . . . the very things you and I would talk about if we sat down in your own home to discuss your financial estate problems.

LOADED WITH TAX–SAVING IDEAS, TOO

I'll show you a special way to give support to an elderly relative or to a growing child. I'll show you how you and the beneficiary can gain valuable tax benefits. I'll show you how to make gifts to charity to take effect at your death—but give you important tax benefits this year. I'll even tell you exactly what you do if you change your mind about any of the trust arrangements or want to change a beneficiary . . . and provide necessary forms.

WHAT DOES ALL THIS MEAN?

It means that you're going to learn how to make the money you earn safer and more productive, you're going to pass it on to your family at your death with a minimum of wear and tear from taxes — and you're going to avoid completely the up-to-10% or 20% cost, the one-to-five year delay and the unwelcome publicity which will attract the attention of unscrupulous persons to your heirs. And you're going to keep the sticky fingers of any probate racketeers out of your family's affairs.

To my knowledge, there's never been a book like this before. It is truly a "do-it-yourself kit" which will enable any literate American to administer his own estate. If you came by your money easily and you don't much care who gets it when you're gone, the book isn't for you. But if you're a hard-working American and you want to decide for yourself, with a conscientious lawyer if you like, who is to get your estate when you're gone, and if you have no intention of bequeathing a chunk of it to the local probate court, this book was written for you.

A father who divides his time between the Old and New Worlds answers the question

Should You Take Your Children to Europe?

By GEOFFREY BOCCA

For some young Americans, a visit to Sicily, above, or Amsterdam, below, may be a summer to remember.

For others, the impact of Switzerland, above, or Paris, below, may be a case of too much, too soon.

THIS SUMMER thousands of parents will be taking or sending their children to Europe.

The Old World is now so quick and inexpensive to get to, it's almost inevitable for American parents to consider it for a vacation sooner or later.

This is a subject which I have studied with some care, as I divide my time between the United States and Europe and have two American children growing up in France. I have also discussed the subject with experts (adult and minor) and witnessed several catastrophies. I have deprived the airlines of considerable revenue by discouraging my friends from taking children to Europe before they can appreciate and enjoy it.

The question is: what age is the right one? When parents take children to Europe, it is for recreation or education or both. As for recreation, unless they already have friends in Europe that they are eager to see, Europe is a hopeless bore for children under 12, 13, or perhaps even 14.

Such a youngster will find more fun in Florida. In Europe the people don't speak his language, and the food is alien and oily. The only fun will be if he finds other American children of the same age who are as miserable as he is.

With education it is a different story, and the experts come up with different answers.

Roberta Bradshaw of the Club Mediterranée, a holiday-camp club, told me, "Europe can be a tremendous emotional shock to a teen-age child. There is too much of everything—too much history, too much culture. It is very rewarding to a well-adjusted child and will give him invaluable memories. But he may have a hard time afterward in the everyday world of home and school. If he is not well-adjusted, the problem might stay with him for a long time."

Teen-age expertise comes from an extremely sensitive girl who is now 17. She went to Europe two years ago to stay with French friends of her parents—and loved every moment.

"But coming back was awful," she said. "My parents laughed at me because I had grown accustomed to eating with my fork in my left hand. 'Be American,' they said. I think they were really frightened that I'd been stolen from them by an alien culture. They didn't realize I was simply growing up and that Europe had hastened the process."

Sometimes the reverse is true. Marion Kingsford of Washington, D.C., was taken to Europe last year when she was 16, and what she enjoyed most was coming back.

"What Europe did was to open my eyes," she said. "I went to Notre Dame and also saw the Leaning Tower of Pisa, and I thought to myself: America has nothing like this. And then I thought again: but Europe has nothing like the Empire State Building or the Smithsonian Institution. Since I have been back, I think I have visited every museum in Washington, something I would never have dreamed of doing before."

The 14-year-old daughter of a friend went with a school group on a camping holiday through France and Italy. "I hated every minute of it," she told my wife and me after she had run away and turned up at our house in the south of France. "The girls did nothing but fight and squabble day and night."

Apparently she was not the only dropout. There is a sound rule to remember: most groups of children in a foreign environment will turn in on themselves either in friendship or hostility rather than out toward the marvels around them.

At 14 years and up, most children have positive, happy feelings about their trip to Europe. It usually runs in proportion to how well they had studied their languages at school. Between 12 and 14, the response is less happy, and under 12 the trip generally leaves no mental impact at all.

The answer seems to be: study your child—and wait. If he is too young, he will have more fun, at less expense to you, in Atlantic City. The older he gets, the more he will enjoy Europe.

Europe has been around a long time. It will be there when your children are ready for it. ◆

Why I Ride the Wild Surf

By HOBIE ALTER

Tandem on a surfboard, Hobie and his wife share that dream of a perfect, giant wave.

EDITORS' NOTE: Hobie Alter, 33, can be called surfing's first millionaire. A one-time champion, he gave up serious competition to concentrate on his surfboard-manufacturing business. He still holds the record for the longest surf ride—a 26-mile run in the wake of a boat.

WHY WOULD anybody want to hurl himself over the top of a peaking wave on a frail surfboard and then shoot down the side while tons of foaming water crash over him?

Let me answer that question by telling you about an incident at Dana Point, Calif., where I live and have a surf shop. It had been a long, fatiguing day at work, and when I got home that evening, the house was hot and both my wife Sharon and I were tired.

Then at 1 a.m. the phone rang. It was Phil Edwards, who had been working late in my shop. "Hobie, you've just got to get back here!" he shouted. "You've never seen anything like these waves!"

I closed my eyes and listened to the baby crying in the next room. You're an adult and too old to go off chasing waves in the middle of the night, I thought. But then I found myself saying excitedly into the phone, "Okay, Phil. I'll be out there in just a few minutes."

The waves were just as Phil had described them—beautiful, lacy five-footers rolling with oiled precision into the smooth Dana Point harbor. The air was soft, the water warm, and the moon bright as a silver dollar. I dived in with my board.

Phil and I were the only persons awake in Dana Point. Out there dancing on the sparkling water with our boards, I think we must have felt we were the only persons really alive in the world. We were "stoked," which is surf lingo for being deliriously happy with waves.

I'm not suggesting that when your baby starts crying, you grab a board and head for the surf. The problems of life usually cannot be solved that easily. But surfing does offer the special excitement and challenge of taking your chances on a wave, whether it's a three-footer or a 30-footer.

There's another reason why people surf. It's the search for a perfect moment when you are locked into the side of a wave, shooting along its green wall while the water roars over your head and foams about your feet. During these moments, you are completely alone, completely alive, and conscious only of the howling, spuming sea that surrounds you and that you are briefly a part of.

More and more people are learning what it means to be stoked. Ten years ago, the sport consisted of a small coterie of West Coast surfers. Today there are an estimated 500,000 surfers in the country. There are now surf movies, surf clothes, surf songs, and surf shops which annually sell $10 million worth of surfboards.

Young people have put the boom in surfing, but they have not totally taken over. People of every age surf. One of the oldest surfers I know is my 80-plus neighbor. I've seen everybody from "gremmies," who are junior surfers, to grannies on boards.

Surfing can be demanding. The good surfer must know how to hit the "soup" (water) if he loses his board and how to hold his breath for 20 or 30 seconds as the wave churns him about. He must know how to handle waves, wind, riptides, fatigue—and, most of all, how to walk away from a beach when it is too much for him.

Surfing is no more dangerous than swimming, Scuba diving, or other aquatic activities. But, as with any of these sports, you have to know what you are doing. I think it's worth the effort.

Once you've ridden that first wave, you will have a dream—a dream of a giant wave that crests above you as you shoot down its green wall and surrounds you in a terrifying, exciting, roaring world of water.

Like me, you will be stoked for life. ◆

Here's news about a revolutionary MATERIALIZATION method, based on a new metaphysical discovery, and now available for the first time in a new book! Yes! Now, for the first time time, one of the most famous and celebrated investigators in the history of psychic research unveils the secret of the ages: how to materialize your thoughts and desires to get what you want from life!

Called "PSYCHO-PICTOGRAPHY," this amazing technique can change your entire life instantly – from the very moment you let it go to work for you – magnetically pulling wealth, love, warm friendship, glorious new vitality and lifelong happiness into your life, as if you owned Aladdin's magic lamp!

PSYCHO-PICTOGRAPHY by Vernon Howard – one of the most exciting and valuable books you will ever read – shows how to work these miracles in your own life:

- HOW TO GET SOMETHING FOR NOTHING – how to materialize all your fondest dreams – make your dreams come true! How to really, actually double your wealth, and keep on multiplying it AUTOMATICALLY – ENDLESSLY!
- HOW TO BRING PEOPLE TO YOU – summon friends, bring love into your life, even "command" long lost friends to return . . . how to keep expanding your circle of loyal acquaintances until you have surrounded yourself with an admiring army of true friends and enthusiastic boosters!
- HOW TO DISSOLVE EVIL – negate schemes against you, perpetuated by others—destroy cruel influences of enemies, unfriendly neighbors, jealous co-workers – virtually rid your life forever of "natural" misfortunes like hard luck or ill health – with your *All-Conquering Gaze!
- HOW TO MENTALLY INFLUENCE OTHERS – command obedience and get people to do your will without uttering a word or lifting a finger! Plus astounding secrets of mental power – how to use your "Mind Television" to profit – focus new alertness and strength with your "Mental Binoculars" – all this, and much, much more!

HOW "PSYCHO-PICTOGRAPHY" WAS DISCOVERED – AND HOW IT WORKS

Vernon Howard, discoverer of this amazing new mental science, is a famous metaphysicist and author. Early in life he began a lifelong search for the scientific basis of occult mysticism. His travels and studies carried him from Lapland to the mysterious Congo . . . from lost civilizations of prehistoric times, to the far reaches of modern science . . . from Alchemy to the weird powers of Zoroaster. After years of study and scientific research, he found – to his astonishment – the key to the MATERIALIZATION OF THOUGHT. Bewildered by the fantastic power he had demonstrated, he wondered – was this some accident, some fluke? Could it be repeated? And – most importantly – could others be taught to perform these miracles of mind?

He discovered that the key to unlocking the powerhouse of the Subconscious Mind lies in a simple fact: the Subconscious is triggered into action by PICTURES, far faster than by words.

Since that moment he has experimented with a series of mental Visual Images – tested them on over one thousand men and women from all walks of life. People with no greater education than yourself. People both young and old. Men and women without any particular Psychic gift. He discovered the technique of PSCYHO-PICTOGRAPHY works. It always works. Quite literally, it CANNOT FAIL, because it operates as mechanically as any other Law of Nature.

CASE HISTORIES PROVE MENTAL POWERS

A certain man, caught in a rain storm, invoked a Mental Picture to protect himself so that he could not be harmed by rain or wind!

A young man, vacationing in Japan, found himself stranded without money. He applied a Mental Picture — and the very next day received passage home from an unknown benefactor!

Another man sought a bank loan for his urgent debts. "Almost jokingly" (as he later admitted) he invoked the power of the Eleventh Pictograph. Entering the bank, he discovered to his utter astonishment an unknown benefactor had placed a mysterious gift of two thousand dollars in his bank account!

This lonely man has never found making friends easy. Forced into a lonely, barren life which denied him companionship, love, even job advancement, he used the Thirty-second and Fifty-sixth Pictographs over a period of thirteen consecutive days. Today he is engaged to marry a charming young woman, and has a host of new friends.

John Colter's Amazing "Injun Run"

By HOWARD EARLE

"INDIANS, Colter! Indians!"

John Potts whispered the warning one hot Summer morning in 1808. He and "Fearless John Colter" were paddling their dugout canoe on the Madison Fork of the Missouri River in what today is southwestern Montana. The two trappers were deep in fierce Blackfeet Indian country and hundreds of miles from the fort at the mouth of the Big Horn.

From the canoe's stern, Colter motioned Potts to continue paddling. Colter knew the treachery of the Blackfeet, that any outward sign of fear would bring slow, agonizing death. He knew, too, that Potts was a nervous man.

"We're in for it," he told Potts. "But I'll pull us through."

Colter was not boasting. He had gone with Lewis and Clark from St. Louis up the Missouri and across the Rockies to the Pacific. He had been tested under the severest conditions.

"He stood up to the Indian chiefs and sign-talked them out of their mischievous intentions. I never met a man of greater courage than Fearless John Colter," wrote Lt. William Clark in his diary.

Colter had been credited with opening trails for the Lewis-Clark expedition when advance seemed impossible. He was the first white man to see the wonders of the Yellowstone Park area and cross the land of the Crow and Blackfeet.

While dealing for pelts, Colter had helped a band of Crow defeat attacking Blackfeet. The Blackfeet had not forgotten the white man's rifle, but Colter knew they would feel secure in numbers now.

Colter took off like a frightened deer, the wild yells of the pursuing savages behind him. Halfway across the plain, he dared to look back.

A single arrow landed in the water near the canoe. Then another and another. The shore became alive with Indians. An arrow zinged close to Colter's head. Not a muscle twitched in his body. He knew the Blackfeet were trying to scare him into action so they would have reason to kill him.

"Keep paddling," he told Potts. "Act like you don't see them."

Potts could take no more. He dropped the paddle, slung rifle to shoulder and fired. An Indian fell.

Seconds later an avalanche of poisoned arrows riddled Potts' body. He collapsed in the canoe.

Colter stood alone, his hand held high, the palm outward in a gesture of friendship. The Blackfeet remembered his magic rifle. They hauled him ashore, stripped him to the waist. A chief asked him how fast he was.

Colter knew the habits of the Blackfeet. He was about to make the "Injun Run." No white man had ever survived the hordes of rushing Indians, spears poised and ready to cut down the human target. Colter was a swift runner—but not swift enough.

"Me no run good. Slow. Bad feet. Hurt," he told the chief.

The chief led Colter about 200 yards beyond the spear-armed Indians. No bows and arrows were allowed in this game. The savages had to overtake their prey and run him through with their spears.

Colter took off like a frightened deer, the wild yells of the pursuing savages behind him. Six miles across the open plain lay the Jefferson Fork of the Missouri. The plain was thick with thorns that tore into his naked feet but the wild cries behind spurred him on.

Halfway across the plain he dared look back. The Indians were gaining. One, far in advance, was cutting the distance too fast to suit Colter. He put on a greater burst of speed, straining every muscle. Blood spurted from his nose and mouth.

Three-fourths of the way across the plain Colter glanced over his shoulder again. He and his lone pursuer had far outdistanced the others. But the one savage was almost upon him. Every instant Colter expected the thrust of the spear in his back.

One mile to the river. Colter thought maybe he could make it. He glanced over his shoulder. It was too late. The Indian was 20 yards away.

Colter stopped dead in his tracks, whirled around, and spread out his arms wide. The Indian, surprised by Colter's sudden stop and frightened by his bloody appearance, tried to halt and throw his spear in the same instant. Exhausted from running, he fell.

The spear went into the ground. Colter seized it and killed the Indian.

The pause enabled the other savages to gain on him. Spears sank into the earth about him. He crashed through the underbrush to the river bank, paused, spotted an island made by driftwood and a beaver's house.

He swam to the driftwood and hauled himself into the beaver house. About him he heard the Indians screeching and thrashing in the water. All day they swam back and forth across the river and up and down its banks, searching for him.

He was naked. His feet were raw, filled with thorns, and bleeding. He was hungry but had no means of killing game.

Weird New Sonic Lure Caught Fish Like Crazy!

By Lyman Walton, Co-Inventor
As Told to Paul Stag, The Weekend Fisherman

Think of it! My new VIBRATING LURE gives loud, GURGLING, SPLASHING, BUBBLING sounds as you skitter it along the surface of the water! Sends out up to 200 vibrations every minute underneath that water! Looks COMPLETELY UNLIKE ANYTHING THAT ANY FRESH WATER FISH HAS SEEN BEFORE.

And has already used this weird sight and weird sound and weird sonic vibrations — in one of its very first Summer trials — to lure fish into attacking it so savagely that they actually knocked it out of the water. Hauled in trout, bass, muskie, walleye, and pike, even when other lures had caught little or no fish right next to it! Here's why —

CAUGHT! 120 FISH IN ONE HOUR!

Yes! Imagine that YOU were there — at Cattail Lake, Illinois, on August 20, 1961. A hot summer day! A beautiful stream-fed pond — 90 by 60 feet wide! Fishermen trying lures, flies, natural bait! But despite the fact that this is a stocked trout farm with no limit, there is only an occasional strike. It looks like a wasted day!

And then, three die-hard friends decide to try their luck with me! We start to cast from the edge of the water. At the end of our lines is an ENTIRELY DIFFERENT LURE — a weird little metal monster that casts like a bullet, and flutters back through the water like a drowning bat!

EVEN EXPERIENCED FISHERMEN WATCHED IN AMAZEMENT!

Almost at once THAT QUIET WATER EXPLODES INTO ACTION! The first strike causes a shout of excitement! And then a second strike! A third, fourth, sixth, seventh, eighth! Beautiful rainbows and browns still shimmering from the water — being pulled in at the rate of more than one every minute!

Now the water is almost exploding with fish striking! Sometimes four and five trout savagely attack one lure at the same time! Fifty — seventy — ninety fish are caught and released! People along the shore stop to watch the spectacle!

Meet Lyman Walton co-inventor of the amazing VIBRA-BAT LURE.

In one short hour, we have caught and released 120 fish! All WITH the very same weird little lure that can go to work for you next week, without your risking a penny!

WHAT'S THE SECRET? UNDERWATER SONIC VIBRATIONS!

Why did this bat-shaped lure catch fish by the stringer-full — even after ordinary lures, and natural bait have caught little or nothing? For this simple reason —

Because this lure gives off unique GURGLING, BUBBLING, SPLASHING SURFACE NOISES — plus up to 200 sonic vibrations every minute underneath that water — that I believe FISH FIND IRRESISTIBLE!

Yes! I am certain that sonic pulsations are the answer to every fisherman's prayer. I have studied the Navy Fish Biologist reports about the sounds fish make between themselves in the water! I have seen fish follow the propellers of a boat as though they were hypnotized by the sound!

And I have always believed that if I could take those gurgling, bubbling, splashing surface sounds and underwater vibrations — that actually seemed to CALL FISH TO THEM — and build that sound into a "Vibrating Lure" then it could haul in eye-popping catches, even where ordinary lures had caught little or nothing at all! Even in hard-fished waters where the wise old fish run away from ordinary lures!

JUST READ THESE FISH-CATCHING ACHIEVEMENTS! TRY IT AT OUR RISK!

Yes! Research showed me that lures, like fish, create Sonic Vibrations in the water by their movements! So I have designed a lure that I estimate FLUTTERS THROUGH THAT WATER UP TO 200 TIMES A MINUTE! Wing-shaped — bat-like — JERKING AND FLUTTERING MADLY THROUGH THAT WATER — SENDING OUT IRRESISTIBLE SONIC WAVES — GURGLING, SPLASHING, BUBBLING SURFACE SOUNDS THAT TRAVEL THROUGH WATER IN EVERY DIRECTION, AT THE RATE OF 4,760 FEET EVERY SECOND, THE ACTUAL SPEED OF SOUND UNDER WATER!

THIS IS AN ARTIST'S CONCEPTION OF THE VIBRA-BAT LURE AND IT'S SONIC EFFECT UNDER WATER! I believe it to be irresistible to fish! Try it entirely at our risk!

No wonder this "VIBRA-BAT" lure caught a 10 pound 7½ ounce Northern on one of its first tests — only moments after it hit the water — hauled in six bass in sixty minutes in another test, all 2½ pounds or larger — pulled in perch by the dozens in a third test at Belmont Harbor, Illinois, even after live bait and lures had scarcely a strike, and CONTINUED to land so many fish, so quickly, THAT FISHERMEN WATCHED IN AMAZEMENT!

No wonder our tests show this revolutionary new lure hauls in trout, bass, muskie, walleye, pike, salmon and other fresh water fish even in hard fished waters — produces strikes even when other fishermen alongside it are going almost unrewarded!

AMAZING 6-MONTH TRIAL OFFER

You simply cannot believe the fish-catching powers of this amazing lure until you try it yourself, FOR 6 FULL MONTHS ENTIRELY AT OUR RISK! We cannot guarantee, of course, that these amazing VIBRA-BAT SONIC LURES will produce for you in every pond, river or lake everytime you go fishing BUT WE DO GUARANTEE that these VIBRA-BAT LURES will definitely catch MORE fish for you . . . make you agree that this is the greatest little lure you've ever used — OR SIMPLY RETURN THEM ANYTIME WITHIN SIX FULL MONTHS FOR EVERY CENT OF YOUR PURCHASE PRICE BACK!

You and you alone are the only judge! You have nothing to lose! Send in the Six Month Trial Coupon TODAY!

SPECIAL NOTICE

Harrison Industries has told on this page the amazing story of the VIBRA-BAT as related to us by Lyman Walton.

We have received signed statements from Lyman Walton and other fishermen that these facts are correct.

Incidentally — the words "Gurgling — Splashing — Bubbling" are Walton's particular translation of the weird sound. Actually no two fishermen would agree on a description of this sound. But you will agree on its amazing results, or your money back!

POLLY'S POINTERS

DEAR POLLY—My boys help dry dishes and often cups meet disaster. Rather than discard them I repair them with glue to use for rooting geranium slips. Whenever a piece of geranium is broken off I plant it in one of these cups which look so pretty on the window sill. There they stay until replanted in the garden.—DONIS

DEAR POLLY—When I knit a sweater I leave a long end of yarn on each piece that is finished to use in sewing up the seams of the body and sleeves.—DOTTY

DEAR POLLY—I finally discovered that the steam from my steam iron was a villain in my fight against rough red hands. Now I keep a pair of white cotton gloves clipped to my pressing board and put them on before starting to press suits and skirts. The hot steam no longer hits my hands directly and ends the battle before it has begun.—MRS. F. W.

DEAR POLLY—When I am coating candies or marshmallows with chocolate I insert a toothpick in each candy before dipping it and turn my colander upside down and place the toothpicks in the colander holes until the chocolate dries.—ANNA

Polly pays a dollar for every idea used. Send them to her, care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY—Mothers with small children should save the plastic bottle caps that come off of dish soap bottles—the snip-top kind. A child will love to play with a necklace made by running a cord through five or six of them.—JEANIE

DEAR POLLY—After using my flour sifter I cover the bottom with a plastic lid from a three-pound shortening can to prevent flour from getting on the shelf. This is much better than using a plastic bowl cover.—MRS. M. C.

DEAR POLLY—I keep two $1 bills tucked under my driver's license in my key case. They are only for an emergency and out of sight, thus I am never tempted to spend them. This will get a flat tire fixed or will buy enough gas to get home. I have only used the money once in two years but it is nice to know it is there when needed. —THELMA

DEAR POLLY—My pointer is for those with green thumbs. After planting flowers or vegetables I place the empty seed packet, with the planting date written on it, in a plastic pill bottle along with any other pertinent information. Recap the bottle tightly and push into the soil. This stays dry and keeps needed information is handy.—MRS. E. D.

DEAR POLLY—I keep a toothbrush handy to use for cleaning cut glass, milk glass and china. The bristles scour out the grooves and keep them sparkling. Love those hints. —MRS. J. E. S.
